Ferries Boost Means 600 Jobs

The shipbuilding industry in B.C. has been given a long-term boost with the announcement Thursday of a $60 million ferry construction program.

Yarrows manager Don Challinor said the announcement could mean at least 600 jobs for Victoria.

Premier Bill Bennett, who is also the province's transport minister, said two new jumbo mainland-Vancouver Island ferries will be built and three existing Gulf Island vessels will be stretched.

Calling the project the largest ferry construction program in B.C. history, Bennett said it is the key to the government's strategy for maintaining a healthy shipbuilding industry in B.C. and providing jobs.

Challinor said Yarrows and its parent firm, Burrard Shipyard of Vancouver, are low bidders for the job of stretching the three small ferries.

If the contract is awarded to Burrard-Yarrows, the job likely will be evenly split between Victoria and Vancouver, meaning between 200 and 250 people would have to be hired here immediately.

"This could happen very soon, in a matter of two or three weeks," Challinor said.

If the company wins the contract for the two new jumbo ferries, one would have to be built in Victoria to meet the timetable. This would require an additional 400 workers, he said.

At the moment, Yarrows has 325 employees but this is reduced to 150 as layoffs today and Monday as a result of the completion of a logging barge for MacMillan Bloedel.

Winning the three stretch ferry contracts would bring the work force back up to about 400 and this could go over 800 if the new ferry is also awarded here.

"This announcement by the premier is very timely," Challinor said.

"Now our skilled people will know that jobs may be available for them very soon.

"It is also significant the premier has pledged to support the shipyards over the next two years. The jobs will be here."

Also bidding to construct the two new ferries will be Vancouver Shipyards, who earlier won the contract for the Queen of Alberni.

The premier said the work

Canadian At Last

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — The Gang Ranch, a spread of nearly a million acres west of this Cariboo community, has become Canadian-owned for the first time in its 117-year history.

Canada's largest ranch in total land under its control has been bought for about $4 million by a family partnership headed by Dale Alsager of Ardrossan near Edmonton.

It last sold in 1948 for about $700,000, and has had three previous owners. The Alsager group bought the Gang from its American owners, Montana cattlemen Floyd Skelton and W. P. Studdert.

"We don't have any fancy plans for it although we do plan to increase forage production and have high priorities for range improvement and wildlife management," Alsager said Thursday.

Rattlesnake from attorney's mailbox

Bandleader's Son Seized In Snaking

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The 20-year-old son of bandleader Stan Kenton was arrested Thursday on suspicion of trying to kill an attorney, an enemy of the Synanon cult, by planting a 4½-foot-long rattlesnake in his home.

Kenton — reportedly a leader of the Synanon cult's paramilitary force called "The Imperial Marines" — and another Synanon member, Joseph Musico, 28, surrendered to police at a Synanon ranch in the Sierra near Badger, Calif., about 200 miles north of Los Angeles.

They were to be flown by helicopter to Los Angeles today.

Attorney Paul Morantz, 33, was reported in good condition by doctors who said he will probably be released from hospital this weekend.

Physicians said earlier he was "severely" poisoned by the rattler's strike and only the swift arrival of paramedics saved his life.

The snake, rattles removed to prevent it from sounding a warning, sank its fangs in Morantz's hand when he reached into his mailbox Tuesday.

Morantz, who won a $300,000 judgment against Synanon last month and has other legal actions pending, was one of several people across the United States, many of them in news work, who complained their lives were threatened after they annoyed the mysterious cult, founded as a drug rehabilitation group.

Pat Lynch, NBC-TV news producer, Thursday became the latest person to say she had been threatened by the group. After she produced a four-part story on the group which "got them very angry," she told reporters in New York, two men stopped her outside the studio and told her "the goal of Synanon is to get your life." She has been under surveillance since, she said.

The Los Angeles Times today quoted unidentified former Synanon members as saying Kenton belonged to a "protective force" within the cult known as "The Imperial

$241,400 DOWN DRAIN YET AGAIN

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government has been paying $241,400 a year to rent 55 waterfront acres here since 1974, but has not occupied the land and has no plans to do so.

The government has another 55 years left on the lease with the Squamish Indians. The lease was signed when Jack Davis was federal environment minister, and an environment centre was planned on the site.

Chief Philip Joe of the Squamish band said it is public knowledge there will be no environment centre.

Day 3 Without Smoke

There were some desperate moments this week but all Times' newsroom participants in the quit smoking program were still nicotine-free today.

We're now in day three and we can admit it hasn't been easy for us to give up the weed.

And we're sure it has been just as difficult for all the folk who wrote in to declare publicly that they were quitting.

The big "I Quit" campaign is underway in conjunction with Dave Cotter's series on how to quit smoking which is appearing in the Times.

While three nicotine-and-tar-free days may not seem like much to non-smokers, for those with habits stretching out over 5, 10, 20 or more years it's [illegible]

So all of you out there who've managed to tough it out this far, take a bow. As fellow quitters, we here at the Times know what you're going through.

This weekend coming up could, unless we're careful, prove the downfall for some of us.

Remember Cotter's advice to: Drink lots of water, go for walks, breathe deeply and try new things — foods included. Keep extra busy and don't think that since you've made it past three days, you've got the tobacco habit licked.

Because your mind can play tricks. It can make you believe that you're okay now, you've proved your point, and just one cigarette (cigar or pipe) couldn't possibly hurt. Well, if you want to blow the whole thing, just try it. You really know that when it comes to tobacco, you either use it or you don't, period.

Hang in there, and take it one day at a time.

PM VOWS 'URGENT STEPS'

Ottawa Poised To Order CUPW Back to Work

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said today the government would "take very urgent steps" if a meeting between representatives of the government and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers failed to end walkouts by inside postal employees.

"There is a meeting going on at this time and we expect the government's representatives to meet with the postal union, CUPW, this afternoon," Trudeau told the House of Commons.

"We are hoping they will call off a strike which is premature in the sense that it was not called by the union executive," he said. "If they don't call the strike off the government will have to take very urgent steps indeed."

A spokesman for Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet, who offered late Thursday to intervene to bring the two sides back to the bargaining table, would lead the talks.

Montreal's 4,500 inside postal workers and several smaller locals of the 23,000-strong CUPW elsewhere in the country struck at midnight Thursday.

Marcel Perreault, head of the Montreal local, said the Montreal workers would not be forced to return to work.

"It's impossible without protection, it's impossible without a collective bargain, to stay in the Post Office," he said.

Following a one-hour meeting with Ouellet this afternoon, postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot said he would report to his union and get back to Ouellet Monday morning.

Parrot, president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said he had not given any commitment to end strikes that started in several centres Friday.

Earlier, Parrot said in a Telex message to Pare Thursday he found it unacceptable that Pare had telephoned the union Wednesday, just days away from the threatened national strike, "to request an informal late-night chat."

The union leader said the post office had plenty of previous opportunities for chatting, but now the union wants serious negotiation.

Meanwhile, the federal anti-inflation monitoring agency says the government's negotiated settlement with the Letter Carriers Union of Canada is too generous.

Robert Douglas, executive-director of the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity, told a news conference today that a "very rich cost-of-living clause" could give the letter carriers increases twice as high as the cost of living in the final six months of their 18-month contract.

"If the private sector and the rest of the public sector were to follow the pattern of this settlement . . . it would in our judgment be extremely difficult to bring down the rate of inflation in this country," Douglas said.

5-5 COMEBACK BY KORCHNOI

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi won the 31st game against chess champion Anatoly Karpov today, leaving the two players tied 5-5. The player who wins the next game takes the title and a record $350,000. The loser receives $200,000.

"I will keep on fighting," he said.

Even if Karpov should come back and win, Korchnoi has pulled off one of the great comebacks in the 13-match history of world championship chess.

Down five games to two in late August after a Karpov victory in the 27th game, Korchnoi won the 28th and 29th games. The 30th, with Karpov playing white, was drawn, and then Korchnoi pulled even with him today.

Asked his chance of winning the match after such a comeback, Korchnoi said, "It will be like a lottery."

Punctured Tanker Smears U.K. Coast

MILFORD HAVEN, Wales (AP) — A punctured Greek tanker that has leaked an oil slick 16 kilometres long and nine kilometres wide, endangering the picturesque South Wales coast, is "listing badly and in danger of sinking," a government official said today.

Remaining oil from 58,829-ton Christos Bitas was being pumped into a vessel alongside, the Esso York, in a bid to lighten and save the tanker, officials said. The ship's hull was pierced when it went aground on reefs near here Thursday while en route from Rotterdam to Belfast.

After almost a tenth of its 245,000 barrels of Iranian crude oil spilled into the sea, the crew managed to transfer oil into empty tanks and stop the leakage, the Welsh Office said.

"We think there is a 50-50 chance of saving the tanker if she can be lightened," said spokesman Elfed Bowen. "The sea is calm but visibility is poor."

Nineteen crew members were rescued from the listing craft today while 13 remained aboard to try to save the tanker. A ship from Rosslare, Ireland, was the first to answer the distress call from the Piraeus-registered vessel.

The coast guard said two other rescue boats were heading for the tanker. No casualties were reported after the ship ran aground off Skomer Island, 16 kilometres from this oil terminal port.

The government said the tanker ruptured three tanks when it hit the reefs. It floated free under its own power and was ordered to head 40 kilometres out to sea in a bid to prevent some of Britain's most beautiful coastline and a nearby wildlife sanctuary from being fouled by the leaking oil.

UVIC MEN OUTRAGED

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

A women-only dance being held tonight by the University of Victoria Womens Action Group (WAG) has raised cries of sexism on campus.

The dance will take place in the student union building and is open to all women, regardless of whether they belong to a feminist organization.

Men, however, are barred.

Outraged men complained to Alma Mater Society (AMS) president Dave Connell and student ombudsman Patty Beatty-Guenter as soon as posters advertising the social event appeared on campus.

Similar complaints were made to the UVic student newspaper, The Martlet.

Both Connell and Beatty-Guenter oppose the concept of women-only dances as discriminatory.

Connell said the AMS will not support any sort of racist or sexist activity and plans to take action against this sort of thing happening again on student property financed with student funds.

WAG is using the building rent-free and also received a $526 budget from the AMS.

Funding for WAG's activities will be reviewed at budget time, Connell said.

He said the organization has done some good things, such as organizing campus day care facilities and has potential.

Beatty-Guenter, a former WAG member, said she reluctantly resigned from the group this year over the dance issue.

She said WAG members believe dances barring men make it easier for women to relate to each other.

WAG members say its regarded as okay for men to go out together and have fun but it's frowned upon for women, she said.

No Strings on Lottery Profits

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Participating governments can spend profits from the Provincial and Express lotteries any old way they like. No questions asked.

Bill Weissmann, an official of the Western Canada Lottery Foundation said today in a telephone interview from Manitoba that although there is a "handshake agreement" among the four western provincies to use the funds for sports and recreation purposes, in reality each province has complete autonomy on how the funds are used.

And that includes, as in the case of the Socred government here, spending $100,000 in lottery cash to build a footbridge in the riding of a backbench Socred MLA.

It apparently doesn't mean a thing that the the B.C. Lotteries Act is quite specific on how the funds are used.

It states they are to be paid out for cultural or recreational purposes or for preserving the cultural heritage of the province or for any other purpose consistent with the objects of the Western Canada Lottery Foundation.

Asked if a footbridge is consistent with the objects of the lottery foundation, Weissmann said it's really none of the foundation's business to tell the provinces what to do.

He said the section of the act that mentions the foundation and its objects is "no longer applicable".

The foundation in effect works for the provinces, not the other way around, he said.

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) said the Socreds' use of lottery monies has turned them into a "political slush fund" for Social Credit MLAs who need help on getting re-elected.

Mrs. Dailly said the government's failure to budget for public need is forcing Social Credit backbenchers to beg money from the lottery fund for projects in their ridings.

"I am sure the footbridge is needed but there is something very peculiar about having to pay for it from the lottery fund which was set up to help the handicapped and aid amateur sport," she said.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said the Socred government's policy is to broaden the field for the use of lottery funds on worthwhile projects.

The footbridge is a worthwhile project because Coquitlam municipality could not afford it and it didn't come under normal highways or public works expenditures, the minister said.

Another NDP spokesman expressed concern that other highways ministry projects will be paid for from lottery funds to hide overruns like the department's overexpenditure of $100 million last year.

StatsCan Index Gets Updating

OTTAWA (CP) — A decade ago the average Canadian rarely bought disposable diapers, jogging shoes, cable television or vacation tour packages.

This month Statistics Canada is changing its most important inflation monitor, the consumer price index, to reflect these, and other new spending patterns among consumers.

The new measure will be introduced next month when the federal agency releases its October cost-of-living figures.

The revised index will be based on a survey by Statistics Canada in 1974 of the prices of the 700 most common items in the budgets of 6,000 households.

It will take into account that oil prices rose sharply in 1973, that Canadians spend about a quarter of their food budget on meals away from home and that expenditure on recreation and leisure products has soaredrecently.

The consumer price index measures price changes in a constant basket of goods and services designed to represent the expenditure of an average Canadian.

The old consumer price index included 325 items.

The old index used as its target group of typical Canadian families living in cities with populations of at least 30,000. These families ranged in size from two to six and had annual incomes ranging from $4,000 to $12,000.

The new measure scraps the outdated income limits. There are 51 cities in the survey, compared with 34 in 1967.

The most important change in the new index is a revision of the relative importance of the various components of the index.

There are seven major spending areas in the index, adding up to 100 per cent. They are:

— Food is assigned an importance of 21.5 per cent, compared with 24.8 per cent previously.

— Housing increases to 34.1 from 31.4 per cent.

— Clothing drops to 10.1 from 11.3 per cent.

— Transportation increases to 15.8 from 15.2 per cent.

— Health and personal care drop to 4.0 from 4.5 per cent.

— Recreation, education and reading increases to 8.3 from 6.9 per cent.

— Tobacco and alchol increases to 6.2 from 6.0 per cent.

There are also changes within the these broad subject groups. In the food component, for instance, the importance of meals eaten outside the home jumps to 4.6 per cent from its previous level of 3.8 per cent.

The old index used as its target group of typical Canadian families living in cities with populations of at least 30,000. These families ranged in size from two to six and had annual incomes ranging from $4,000 to $12,000.

Malaspina Selection Vetoed

A federal immigration spokesman said Thursday the ministry will not accept the appointment of an American citizen as president of Nanaimo's Malaspina College.

Ian Thomson, director general of the B.C. and Yukon division of manpower and immigration, said the department is not satisifed that the college had conducted an adequate search for a qualified Canadian candidate.

Because of this, he said, the department will not approve the recommendation of the college's search committee to hire Dr. Jack Nutt, now president of Highland College in Kansas.

Nutt was announced the prime candidate after Canadian and American applications had been reduced to a short list of four.

A college spokesman said Thursday that there would be no statement until after the college council meets.

The search for a replacement for the previous president Dr. Carl Opgaard, a U.S. citizen, began when his resignation was accepted in May.

Thomson said his department would assist the college in an effort to find a suitable Canadian citizen or landed immigrant for the job.

CBC Blacklisting Claimed

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian performers such as Percy Saltzman who are outspoken in their criticism of the CBC are being blacklisted by certain corporation producers, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission was told Thursday.

Ben Nobleman, a Toronto alderman and a member of the Association of Canadian Radio and Television Actors, said there were other well-known performers who haven't been working for the CBC for three to five years and who are convinced they are being blacklisted. But they didn't want their names made public.

Saltzman, a featured performer on a number of CBC programs, hasn't worked for the corporation for five years, Nobleman said.

Ron Fraser, CBC vice-president for corporate affairs, denied in an interview later the existence of a such a list.

Nobleman said "if the blacklisting is not discontinued, our society will request Canada's Human Rights Commissioner Gordon Fairweather to investigate the situation."

Nobleman was presenting a brief to the commission hearings on CBC licences on behalf of a group named the Society for the Recognition of Canadian Talents.

He said CBC producers and officials have failed to advertise and promote Canadian talent and this has led a large number of performers, such as Monty Hall, Arthur Hiller, Larry Mann and Bernard Slade, to go to the United States.

In spite of CBC president Al Johnson's statement that more Canadian programming was needed on television, some producers persist in hiring American actors and actresses for chiefly Canadian plays.

He noted that ACTRA members had to picket the CBC to prevent it from hiring an American actress to play the role of Canadian suffragette Nellie McClung. The part was played by Canadian Kate Reid.

Nobleman said that if CBC producers fail to follow Johnson's policy, they should be forced to resign.

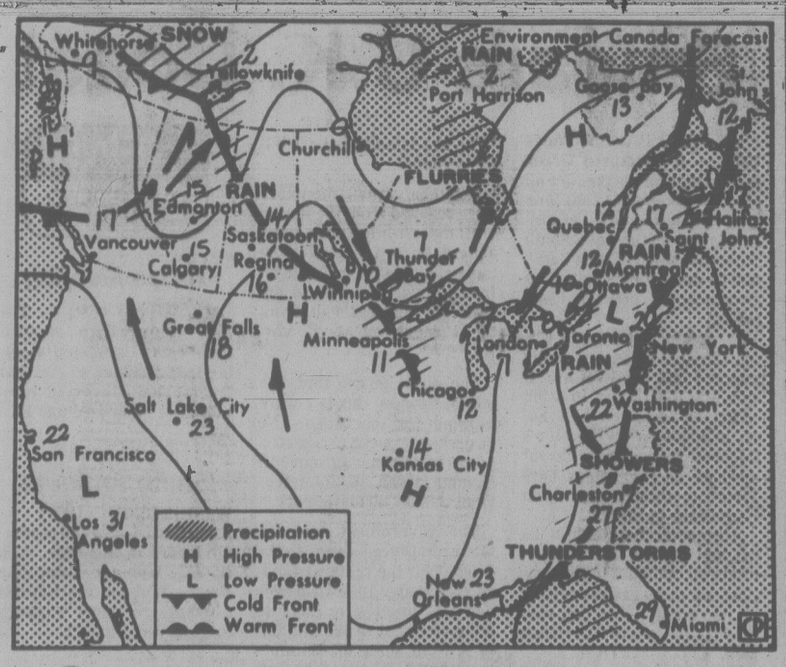

Map valid until noon Saturday

A ridge of high pressure will maintain sunny skies over southern B.C. today and through the weekend. Meanwhile, a Pacific disturbance draped across northern B.C. will produce cloudy skies. Occasional rain or drizzle will continue along the coast with some precipitation penetrating across the coast mountains into the central interior. Some improvement is expected over northern B.C. during the weekend as the disturbance weakens and the ridge of high pressure builds into the area.

Sex Pistol Murder Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Punk rock pioneer Sid Vicious, the spiky-haired musician who gained notoriety with the Sex Pistols, has been charged with the knifing murder of his American girl-friend and manager.

The 21-year-old Englishman, whose real name is John Simon Ritchie, was arrested Thursday. He was to be arraigned today in Manhattan Criminal Court on charges of killing Nancy Spungen, 20, of Philadelphia, with whom he had lived for 18 months. She recently also became his manager.

Police said Ritchie called them Thursday morning and told them to come to his first-floor room in the Chelsea Hotel. When they arrived, Ritchie told them he had woken up to find Miss Spungen had been stabbed once in the abdomen.

Detective Jerry Thomas said Ritchie was arrested a short time later.

Thomas said Ritchie, who along with the now-defunct Sex Pistols had cultivated an image of violent anarchy both on and off stage, did not do "anything outrageous" while in custody.

The Sex Pistols broke up earlier this year when the lead singer, who called himself Johnny Rotten, left the group. Ritchie made news in New York on the same day Rotten announced his departure when he collapsed on a plane from Los Angeles, apparently the victim of alcohol and pills.

Vicious escorted from death hotel by New York police

One of the band's most popular numbers, God Save the Queen, featured anti-royalist lyrics on the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth's reign. The song was banned from British radio.

The group's first trip to the United States was delayed by the U.S. state department, which was wary of issuing visas to group members because of their criminal records.

Malcolm McLaren, the group's manager, has said Ritchie "has a few assaults on his record, like knocking a policeman's teeth out. It was all petty stuff really. But it seems to have made the Americans very nervous."

Robert Christgau, a rock critic for the Village Voice, a New York weekly newspaper, said Ritchie and other members of the band recorded an album without Johnny Rotten this summer. The album included Ritchie's version of the Frank Sinatra-standard, My Way.

Christgau said Ritchie appeared locally two weeks ago with several members of another punk rock band, the New York Dolls.

Green Line Firing Hinders Truce

BEIRUT (CP) — Explosions and sniper fire wounded five persons during the night as Lebanese army units moved into buffer zones to prop up the wobbly Syrian-Christian truce.

The violence flared along the so-called green line dividing Moslem western Beirut and Christian eastern Beirut. The troops took up station in two Christian suburbs.

The ceasefire, implemented last Saturday by Syrian President Hafez Assad and his Lebanese counterpart Elias Sarkis, capped 10 days of fighting that killed about 1,300 Lebanese.

Sarkis is trying to end the Syrian-Christian conflict and reconcile the Moslem majority and the entrenched Christian minority who make up the bulk of Lebanon's population.

Meanwhile, fears that the ceasefire is headed for collapse mounted today following reports from Israel that Syria is preparing a fresh attack on Christian militias in Beirut.

Officials in Jerusalem said the Syrians are sending reinforcements, chiefly heavy artillery, to Beirut where they have been waging battles against Christian militias.

There is no confirmation of Syrian reinforcements but in Beirut where residents are living under immense pressure, the Israeli reports were enough to send tension rising as the uneasy ceasefire went into its sixth day.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis returned from Damascus, Syria, on Thursday following an Arab tour in preparation for a foreign ministers' conference Sunday of countries contributing troops and funds to the Arab League peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

Syria provides more than 90 per cent of the 30,000-member force.

Israel backs the Christian militias, who are based on the support of Lebanon's Maronite Christians. They are demanding the withdrawal of the Syrians.

Anniversary Accord New Mideast Goal

WASHINGTON — The Egyptian and Israeli peace talks today moved smoothly into the second day of negotiations after a day of good progress in the first sessions on Thursday.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and the U.S. delegation met the Egyptian negotiators this morning. The three delegations were scheduled to meet together later today and then take a one-day break for the Jewish Sabbath.

First-round talks Thursday produced "good progress," said a spokesman for all three governments, who said "everyone there felt it was a good beginning."

This source said none of the tension that marked the Camp David, Md., negotiations is evident and the two Middle East countries are proceeding in a businesslike fashion to get the job done.

The target is completion within two months of a treaty outlining Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai, security measures and diplomatic exchanges. There is an even more optimistic target of Nov. 19, the first anniversary of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's offer of peace to the Knesset (Israeli parliament).

As the talks began, U.S. President Carter and chief Egyptian negotiator Kamal Hassan Ali invited other Arab countries and the Palestinians to negotiate with Israel.

Their intention is to rebut Arab critics who claim the Camp David accords ignore Palestinian interests and might lead to a separate Egyptian-Israeli peace.

"The United States is committed, without reservation, to seeing this process through until each party is at peace with all the others," Carter said.

Decision Day? Yawn

It is regrettable that the referendum set for next month on municipal incorporation for the collection of unorganized communities to the west of Victoria has met with such an apathetic response.

Barely 100 people turned up Wednesday evening at an information meeting at Belmont high school in Colwood, a tiny fraction of the estimated population of 20,000-plus in the area. The general reaction so far seems one of barely stifled boredom.

This is a pity, because unless the Nov. 18 referendum attracts a creditable number of voters who can pile up a substantial vote one way or the other, the issue will not be settled and incorporation and amalgamation will continue as perennial issues.

Some say that people are sick and tired of the years of talk about municipal status, that they've heard or read all the possible arguments in favor or against several times over. Perhaps, but that is no excuse for abdicating one's civic duties, which are real and tangible whether you live in an incorporated city or a formless conglomeration in the suburbs. Residents ought to rouse themselves from their apathy and come out in force to decide once and for all what they want.

Our position has been that the communities of View Royal, Colwood-Langford and Metchosin would be better off as municipalities. Their problems will not go away by refusing to organize for self-rule; the opposite is more likely, things will get worse if residents refuse to face the inevitable.

They cannot rely forever on the ministrations of their overworked representatives on the Capital Regional District to alleviate complaints and crises.

Some say they have no real choice in this referendum, that even if the vote goes against incorporation the municipal affairs department will step in and legislate a municipality into existence anyway, as the NDP government did at Kamloops, Kelowna and Nanaimo to forcibly amalgamate suburbs and cities.

All the more reason for taking that step first in the community, instead of meekly waiting for incorporation to be imposed from the top.

The best reason of all is that the communities need local leadership to deal with the probems and pressures of population growth in the coming years, to speak for and defend the local community when the province and the Capital Regional District start planning what should happen and what should go where in the Victoria region.

Without that shield of municipal incorporation, Colwood, Langford, View Royal and Metchosin are pretty defenceless against whatever senior governments want to do.

A B.C. Whirlybird Salut

In these days of gloomy pessimism about the future of Canada, it was warmly encouraging to see the Vancouver firm of Okanagan Helicopters bucking the current trend and voicing confidence in the future of Quebec within Canada. In contrast with some of the recent corporate moves out of Quebec, accompanied by weighty interpretations and self-righteous predictions, Okanagan's decision to expand into La Belle Province by shifting its key regional headquaters from Ontario to Montreal was announced Wednesday with little fanfare and remarkably restrained media coverage. It makes one wonder about the preconceptions and private biases of some of our constitutional commentators and pundits.

Perhaps Okanagan simply does not rate the attention given a major financial institution like Sun Life Assurance Co., which waited an indecently short time after Rene Levesque's election before announcing it was pulling the pin and getting the hell out of Quebec. Perhaps Okanagan is seen simply as some British Columbia bush operation, occasionally called upon to find an errant hiker or fly a prospector to his sluice box. But with a fleet of 150 aircraft, Okanagan is actually the largest helicopter company in Canada and the third largest in the world. Last year it took in revenues of $36 million, with Quebec operations contributing $6 million. And, as the Quebec move indicates, the company is growing.

Officials of Okanagan Helicopters are the first to admit that their decision has nothing to do with keeping Quebec in Confederation. What they do say is that the move is based strictly on economics, that studies show Quebec is the best location for a regional headquarters and a base for international operations. This, and the company's transfer of 45 present employees and creation of 100 new jobs at Montreal, would certainly seem to indicate that not everyone in Canada has given up on Quebec.

This is a bold step for any Canadian company at any time and hopefully it will prove successful. That it comes from a British Columbia company makes it even more encouraging.

Trudeau Loses Momentum

OTTAWA — At the edge of the camera's eye as it panned over the MPs streaming into the senate chamber to hear Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger read the speech from the throne, you may have noticed two large arrangements of daisies, chrysanthemums and snowballs framed by bright red maple leaves.

If you missed them, it's a pity: the floral arrangements were done with verve and style. In fact, it's a double pity, because by missing the flowers you missed the one thing on parliament's opening day that was fresh and new.

Well, to be accurate, one other thing was new — the pagegirls, looking like liberated, blithe-spirited nuns as they hurried about in their uniforms of black knee-length skirts, black jackets, black stockings and shoes, and high-collared, white blouses.

Otherwise, nothing that was done, or that was said by Leger on behalf of the government, could have surprised anyone except possibly a trapper just back from Tuktoyaktuk.

Loves the Queen

The government really does loves the Queen. She got an entire paragraph to herself. To clear up "some misunderstanding," such as last summer's constitutional proposals which would have changed the role of the Queen, the government now swore an oath of loyalty not "to change or to reduce in any way the role Her Majesty plays."

Business got treated with almost as much deference as did royalty. The government loves them also. It promised to "encourage a more vigorous expansion of the private sector," and declared that "the main thrust" of its job creation policies would be "in the private sector."

Lastly, the government still thinks that a new constitution would be a good thing, although with a shade less enthusiasm than before, and it thinks that over-pensioned and over-salaried civil servants are a bad thing, this with a shade more enthusiasm than before.

Ho hum. We've heard it all before, even though many of us don't really believe most of it.

Prime Minister Trudeau's problem, it is plain, is that he himself delivered the real throne speech two months ago — on Aug. 1 when he got back from Bonn by way of Morocco and went on television to announce new economic programs. These were designed as fodder for a fall election, which Trudeau then cancelled. In effect, Trudeau fired his last, best shots long before he could see the whites of his enemies' eyes.

To postpone an election and then leave yourself with nothing with which to win the delayed contest, seems crazy. And is. Trudeau now has lost all political momentum.

Yet to this craziness, there may be some method. If Canadians, in their present cantankerous mood, seek anything, it seems to be not brave new ideals nor bright new ideas but sound, sober, old-fashioned management.

By bringing down a deliberately dull throne speech, Trudeau may have improved his prospects of regaining a reputation as a good manager. (Indeed, good managers, as they sometimes plaintively remark, are almost always written off as dull).

As revealing as what the throne speech did say (which wasn't much), was what it didn't say (which was a great deal). Gone from the legislative list were two controversial items that long have irritated the business community — the Borrowers and Depositors Protection Act, which would regulate interest rates, and the Competition Act, which would strengthen the anti-monopoly regulations.

THRONE SPEECH
. . . read by the Legers

As deliberately, it seems, the government has used the throne speech to lower its own expectations. Trudeau's ambitious goal of completing phase one of his new constitution by July 1, 1979, has been scaled down to the timid one of making "concrete progress . . . in the course of this session." This new open-ended, timetable should end much of the pressure, upon, and therefore the friction between, Trudeau and the premiers.

If Trudeau pursues his dullness-equals-good management tactic, parliament may undergo a role reversal. The Conservatives, sensing the same public mood, have likewise set out to be dull. Since the session's start, the Conservatives have deliberately been statesmanlike, restrained, non-partisan. Only the New Democrats are left. Long damned as the dullest party of the lot, the NDPers may suddenly find themselves cast as Parliament's only blithe spirits — the pagegirls excepted.

There is a further difficulty in discussing the division of powers at the present time. The Trudeau government is conspicuously weak, desperate to retain power but facing a very uncertain future. No government in such a situation should be discussing fundamental constitutional issues that would, if action were taken, profoundly affect the government of the country for many years ahead. That is the sort of thing that should only be approached by a government with a fresh mandate from the people, not one that has all but exhausted its electoral authority. Not merely a Quebec election, but a federal one as well must intervene before the future division of powers within the federation can fruitfully or even properly be negotiated.

Election Needed

The new throne speech is one more piece of evidence showing how badly an election was needed last spring or this autumn and how much disservice the prime minister did the country by postponing it. We face an electioneering session of parliament, not a constructive one, with a government that possesses only legal, not moral, authority in the country. To create such a situation is to carry the ambition for prolonged power to an unwarranted degree. There have been few times when the Liberal party or the government drawn from its ranks have looked less arrogant but this desperate clinging to what may be the final moments of power, regardless of the effect on the nation, is supremely arrogant. Worse, it is a demonstration of vanity and ambition triumphing over public duty.

There are ways in which this speech appears to have been written in a vacuum. It repeats the pious wish for a less contentious federal-provincial relationship. A good aim, but the government of Alberta, for instance, could hardly think it a serious one. That provincial government not many months ago negotiated an agreement with the federal government on prices for natural gas. Twenty-five days later Ottawa took action to break it; a contentious relationship is not nearly as much a matter of constitutional change as of behaving in ways that do not create them. Listening to the throne speech, it seemed impossible that such a simple idea had occurred to the government.

". . .to hell with David Cotter and to hell with your pledge, Gordon . . . come down and have a cigarette . . ."

Halifax Replies

Many of your readers who are former residents of Halifax have forwarded to me copies of the article which appeared in your newspaper in which you quote Brian Small, manager of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, as having referred to Halifax as "an old, tired, grubby, unattractive city" (Town Talk, Sept. 29).

It was unfortunate Mr. Small was unable to see any part of Halifax other than the older section around the hotel. While every city has its "sore spots" (and no doubt Victoria has them too), Mr. Small could not possibly have taken the time to see our beautiful public gardens, a unique example of a formal garden without parallel in this area; Point Pleasant Park, which is an area of woodland with nature trails almost in the heart of the city; Citadel Hill, [illegible] in Canada; our Historic Properties, one of the most attractive waterfront developments in Canada, situated in the centre of a modern, busy high-rise downtown area; our modern shopping complexes and malls and our older residential areas which are unmatched for charm and character, with tree-lined streets and large, well-maintained homes.

The Northwest Arm, which intrudes into the city, is an exhilarating sight on the kind of bright, sunny days which prevailed when Mr. Small was here — with scores of yachts and pleasure boats of all kinds sailing against a backdrop of trees and gracious homes.

Many people from all over the country who participated in the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce told us they considered Halifax to be one of the most beautiful cities in Canada.

It is hard to understand what motivated Mr. Small to make such uncomplimentary comments about his host city. Is it possible he missed everything? Perhaps the Canadian Chamber of Commerce program was too crowded to allow him time to get out of his hotel and explore the city. If this is the case, perhaps he should have withheld judgment until he could spend some more time in Halifax. — Gordon H. Lummis, General Manager, Halifax Board of Trade.

Right to Work

Are more than 60 per cent of the rank and file B.C. trade unionists lunatics, fanatics, neo-fascists, bigots and extreme right-wingers? Is more than 75 per cent of the general public to be included in the same categories?

Statements made by union leaders at the International Woodworkers of America's annual convention held in Vancouver last week certainly carried such implications.

These union leaders are absolutely paranoiac when speaking about the subject of right-to-work legislation. Apparently they fail to recognize the fact that every reliable survey of public opinion taken during the past two years indicates in unmistakable terms that union rank and file members overwhelmingly believe union membership shouldnot be compulsory.

The general public feels even more strongly about this matter. Some surveys indicate that more than 80 per cent are opposed to compulsory union membership.

The question is: are all of these people lunatics and fanatics? The regional president of the IWA vigorously protested that the "so-called right-to-work concept would prohibit workers from being forced to join unions."

The president of the powerful Canadian Labor Congress was reported as saying that right-to-work is "neo-fascism" and "bigotry" of the worst kind.

Just who are the lunatics and fanatics? The majority of the rank and file trade-unionists, and an even larger majority of the general public; or a handful of union leaders fighting to protect their own vested interests? — Ralph J. Purdy, Vice-President, Independent Contractors and Businessmen Association.

Vietnamese children in Saigon orphanage.

A Shabby Tale

Given that B.C has a reported surplus of $140 million, that Premier Bennett gave out approximately $30 million of pre-election style goodies on his recent jaunt around the province, and that Premier Bennett continues to merrily feed the fires of the press speculation concerning an election, it is timely to bring up an atrocious and outrageous example of moral and political bankruptcy by the present premier of the province.

Quite simply, the issue concerns a unanimous pledge by our legislature in February, 1973 to send $2¼ million in medical aid to the children of Vietnam. This commitment was one of kindness and unselfishness from the people of B.C. to innocent children ravaged by years of war and dread. This $2¼ million still remains in B.C.

The disbursement committee set up under the previous government was concerned that the money would not reach the children of Vietnam (the war was still going on), so gave small amounts of money to several aid agencies to check the accountability of these agencies. According to Dr. Scott Wallace, who was a member of the initial committee, the committee was satisfied as to the agencies' accountability, and was prepared to disburse the remainder of the funds to these agencies. It was at this time however that the NDP called an election, and subsequently lost.

In February, 1977, Dr. Scott Wallace asked Premier Bennett about this commitment once again. In reply the premier stated: "Concerning the money that was voted by this house for children in Vietnam, I'm sure the obligation remains with all of us. Nobody denies that." Further the premier stated: "It was made and quite properly still remains a commitment." And yet further: "That's fine; it will be done and the money will be found."

Since this specific pledge, little has been done. An all-party committee was set up, could not meet twice because of a lack of quorum, finally met to elect a chairperson, heard briefs from six aid agencies with histories of successful projects in Vietnam and then was allowed by the government to disband. In January this year, the chairperson of the committee publicly stated that the money may not go to Vietnam because it could just as well be used in B.C. The committee was not reconstituted when the legislature met again last spring.

In June of this year, a member of the Vietnamese embassy in Ottawa made an unofficial and informal visit to the legislature to thank B.C. for its five-year-old pledge. Premier Bennett could not even make the time to meet this official.

As this premier readies for an election, as the provincial coffers swell, and as the premier hands out million dollar cheques on his tour of the province, it is important to ask what kind of person is running our government. It is obvious to this individual that this premier is neither a man of principle nor moral integrity, as witnessed by his handling of the pledge he so rightly took upon this government.

The United Nations has deemed 1979 the Year of the Child. This province can still live up to its commitment. What better present to the children of Vietnam who still suffer the wounds of war than B.C. fulfilling its 5½-year-old pledge? — Phil Esmonde, 1250 Fairfield Road.

Best Ever Year

Now that our tourist season is winding down, I think it is appropriate to comment on the results of this past season. In a nutshell, it is the best ever. It seems the proof of the pudding is indeed in the eating and now that we know the results, due credit should be given. Grace McCarthy and her hard-working department deserve full marks for pushing ahead in spite of a lot of flak from the more shortsighted members of our community.

Also those employees of the British Columbia Ferry Corp. who worked so very hard to move as many people as possible with as little inconvenience as possible deserve a bouquet.

Last, but by no means least, the members of our armed forces surely deserve a great deal of credit for the incredible job they did throughout with the Captain Cook celebrations. Much of their work has gone unnoticed by the general public and they do deserve great credit.

British Columbia has been a great place to be this year, it is good to see our economy improving and our people becoming more and more confident in the future. We need more people like Grace McCarthy who get things done and don't run for cover every time the going gets tough. By the way, I hear the government of Australia is coming up with a new slogan to help improve their tourist industry. It's called "Smile!" — Don Wray, 933 Admirals Road.

Reformed Basher

The other day I was in a fog when I went to the motor vehicles branch. I found the staff behind the wickets to be patient and helpful beyond the proverbial call of duty, as well as cheerful and competent. For that matter, in the course of many trips during the last few months to the McKenzie bottle shop, I've also found the staff there to be cheerful and cooperative.

Ordinarily, I tend to be a bureaucrat-basher, but as the cliche goes, "give credit where credit is due." — Daniel J. Koenig, 3869 Persimmon Drive.

The Way Of Diplomacy Is Silence

By HENRY FAIRLIE
The Washington Post

Sadat, Carter, Begin . . . backgammon better?

The announcement of the two accords that were reached at Camp David almost spoiled the show. For a time it seemed that diplomacy might be allowed to do its secret underground work, like the tunnels that honeycomb a limestone cliff, the channels worn smooth by the hidden streams of water that run babbling unseen beneath our feet. Until the accords were announced, I held to my fondest hope: that the three leaders were playing backgammon, which is a good game for diplomats.

But of course the main participants were not diplomats. They were politicians. In his little classic on "Diplomacy," Harold Nicolson said: "A more dangerous innovation in diplomatic practice is the tendency of foreign countries to allow their politicians to take a personal part in negotiation. Clearly there are moments when it is essential that the prime minister or foreign secretary should attend important conferences. Yet repeated personal visits should not be encouraged.

"Such visits arouse public expectations, lead to misunderstandings, and create confusion. The time available at the disposal of these visitors is not always sufficient for patience and calm deliberation. The honors which are paid to a minister in a foreign capital may tire his physique, excite his vanity, or bewilder his judgment." (Those dangers at least were averted by the retreat from the capital to Camp David). "Diplomacy is not the art of conversation," Nicolson abruptly concluded. Neither are its ways easily described by the arts of journalism.

Every journalist who has covered important international conferences can tell of the moment when the strange feeling overtakes him that what he is trying to report is not there. He tries to catch at the meaning of a word, the significance of an exchange, the importance of a demarche, but as he reaches, it drifts out of his grasp, like the string of a balloon, and the balloon itself then melts into the pale blue firmament.

Perhaps the theorists of the 16th century were not wrong when they contended that the first diplomats were angels, since they served as "angeloi" or messengers between heaven and earth. "This is not a view," said Nicolson drily, "that would be held by modern historians." Yet having reported many international negotiations and conferences since the Anglo-French Treaty of 1946, I have to say that the true diplomat for all his worldliness seems often to be a sprite engaged in the most ethereal of missions.

The days of silence at Camp David reminded us that the ways of diplomacy are not for the public gaze. One could say that democracy, if its claims are pushed to an extreme, is the enemy of diplomacy. If the purpose of diplomacy is "to create international confidence, not to sow international distrust," the inquisitiveness and publicity of democracy, squinting at the keyhole, is hardly the atmosphere in which to conduct it. If "the worst kinds of diplomatists are missionaries, fanatics, and lawyers," and "the best kind are the reasonable and humane skeptics," there is something in democracy that unhappily tends to encourage the first, and make it difficult for us to appreciate and sustain the second.

Nicolson's classic work is the only profound treatise that we have had on the subject since Ernest Satow's prodigious and ageless inquiry. Its importance is that it was written as democracy was making its impertinent demands on diplomacy and, as the son of a diplomat and himself one for a time, Nicolson was as sensitive as any other of the old school to the dangers to its ways. Like all trained diplomats, he had nothing but contempt for the democratic bungling that led to the Treaty of Versailles in 1919.

It's game for diplomats And not the politicians

I once suggested to Henry Kissinger that, when he had finished his memoirs, the work that waited for him to write it was the successor to Harold Nicolson's. It would be fascinating and instructive because Kissinger is perhaps the diplomat in our time who has most imaginatively tried to combine his respect for the old ways of diplomacy, not only with the need to cater to the demands of democracy, but no less with his own willingness to use and exploit the publicity on which democracy so voraciously feeds.

George Canning at the Congress of Vienna was perhaps the politician-diplomat who first clearly realized the impact of public opinion in a democracy on diplomacy, "a power more tremendous than was perhaps ever yet brought into action in the history of mankind."

And of course the politician-diplomats left Camp David to confront at once and before anything else the public opinion in their own countries that is at once their creature and their master.

But apart from the pressure of this demon of democracy — the public opinion that politicians too recklessly arouse only to find later that they are unable to control it and make a reasonable settlement — there is another influence of democracy on diplomacy that is harmful. I was not being entirely frivolous in saying that I hoped that the leaders at Camp David were playing backgammon. There is the game of diplomacy — to be played, as Satow puts it, with "tact and intelligence" — and democracy does not quite like it.

It does not really like it, because it does not understand it. All the little shifts of the diplomat: are these how great issues are decided? It is claimed for Jimmy Carter, and Anwar Sadat has claimed for himself, that one or both of them, at some crucial stage at Camp David, brought things to a head by saying that, if no accord was reached in a day or two, they would have to go home. This is of course the oldest of tricks, used most brilliantly by Disraeli at the Congress of Berlin, when he ordered his train in its siding to get up steam, and be ready to leave at midnight. This command was private, but of course waved in front of Bismarck's nose, and within an hour or two the Iron Chancellor had capitulated to the threat of the Iron Horse!

"It does not matter whether it is a cabinet meeting or an international conference," Clement Attlee once said to me when he was prime minister, "call the meeting two hours before lunch, put off the difficult questions until last, and then as everyone is getting ready to go to lunch say, "Oh! there's this other matter: can we all agree . . . ?', and magically all the disagreements seem to disappear."

When his cabinet was deciding whether or not to admit Turkey to NATO, he went round the table, "collecting the voices," and each member gave his strategic or economic or political reasons, for or against. At last it came to Attlee to utter his own opinion, and so pronounce the decision which the cabinet would then accept. "Fought against the Turks at Gallipoli," he snapped. "Rather have them on my side than on theirs." The minister who told me this story said: "Of course, he was right. We could have argued the 'real' reasons until kingdom come and been no nearer to a decision, and his 'reason' was just as much to the point as any of ours."

The opposite of these tactful shifts was of course the diplomacy of Woodrow Wilson at Paris in 1918-19. Here was meant to be the realization of the first of his Fourteen Points — "Open convenants of peace, openly arrived at" — but in the event, as Nicolson mordantly said, "few negotiations in history have been so secret, or indeed so occult." Here indeed was the missionary and the fanatic as diplomat — always the temptation of democracy — and if not the lawyer then certainly the theologian.

"He was ill-prepared and ill-informed," wrote Walter Weyl at the time, in a judgment that is now generally held. "He grew confused and lost his perception of what could, and what could not, be done. He was stubborn when he should have been open-minded, vacillating when he should have been decided." And the explanation? "He seems to see the world in abstractions. To him railroad cars are not railroad cars, but a gray, generalized thing called 'Transportation' . . . Morals and laws are not created out of the rub and wear of men and societies, but are things innate, uncreated, immutable, absolute." There is only one thing to add. It is in such abstractions that democracy sees the world, and encourages its leaders to think.

It is democracy that turns "settlements" and "territory" into abstractions, because it is these abstractions that are the slogans by which it was aroused. It does this because it naturally reverts to what Nicolson called the "warrior" concept of diplomacy: the belief that the purpose of negotiation is victory, and that the denial of complete victory means defeat, whereas the civilian or "mercantile" theory of diplomacy is based on the assumption that "a compromise between rivalries is generally more profitable than the complete destruction of the rival." There were signs at Camp David of "warrior" diplomacy giving way to "shopkeeper" diplomacy.

Diplomacy shuns the abstractions and deals with "corporeal, gross, very human beings." It relies on the virtues that Nicolson lists in the diplomat — reason, moderation, discretion, patience, tact — and we can freely acknowledge that Carter displayed and encouraged these. They are virtues best engaged in privacy. There are places where the sunshine of "sunshine laws" should not be allowed to penetrate, and the reckless walls of Camp David were for this reason a relief in an over-informed world.

Fifteen Ridings Don't Make 'Mini-Election'

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — There's something whimsical or out of phase about byelections in politics.

When a Parliament meets after 264 MPs have been chosen in a general election, something more than who forms the government and who has the opposition role has been settled.

The cast for a Parliament is struck. It's very rare that byelection results later alter the cast in its tone or style, let alone change who governs and who opposes.

My reading of the past few days on the history of byelections confirms that, in their own context, byelections get inordinate attention given what they usually accomplish — "results" in new men or women and their use as straws in the winds of partisan valuations.

Time and again, I've found the press phrase "mini-election" for as few as four byelections. In May, 1971, there were four byelections — one in Nova Scotia, two in Quebec, and one in Ontario. It was labelled a "mini-election." When the NDP won in Brant, the only upset in party terms, it was momentarily seen as very significant.

In May, 1977, there were six byelections. Again, old clippings show the vogue of the term "mini-election," which the results and the 17 months since have hardly confirmed. There was one upset involving a Prince Edward Island seat held by the Tories.

It meant nothing much then, and as little now, that the Liberals won that seat.

What I've been setting out is a case against putting much stress on byelections, even when we get 15 of them at once, as we shall have Monday.

However, there are several unusual aspects to these 15 openings which comes so terribly late in the existence of this Parliament.

Twice before there've been eight byelections at the same time. But this happening almost doubles those.

Another oddity is the unusually-distinguished nature of the MPs who held the 15 seats. Eight of the 15 are privy councillors, six for the federal government and two for provincial governments. Five of the 15 were genuine, front-rank figures in politics for some years — Drury, Sharp, Macdonald, Wagner and Fairweather. Another, Andre Fortin, the late Crediste leader, was an exceptional young man.

GUAY

Certainly, Torontonians Stanbury, Gilbert, and Haidasz had their high moments as MPs. Bob McCleave, the Tory from Halifax, went to a judgeship after an excellent performance as a working MP; the same rating must be given Jack Marshall, the Tory Newfoundlander the PM slipped into the Senate. Even John Reynolds, the obnoxiously-forward Tory from Vancouver, was an unusual and very viable MP.

The same might be said about noisy Joe Guay, the ex-Liberal whip, who exchanged St. Boniface for the Senate.

Hugh Poulin, the Liberal who chose the bench over Ottawa Centre, and Sean O'Sullivan, the boy worshipper of Diefenbaker who left Hamilton-Wentworth, are the only very ordinary MPs being replaced in the byelections.

The unusual quality of the departed MPs may make more unpredictable how the votes will go. For example, I'm remembering that before Mitchell Sharp won Eglinton it was known as a Tory stronghold. And Broadview, before John Gilbert took it for the NDP, had a similar label.

Another oddity in these byelections is that not a single widow or wife is running to replace her husband. This was a fashionable practice in 'fifties and 'sixties byelections.

The other day, a Liberal MP who has campaigned in four of the byelection ridings told me he thought the split would be 7-6-2 or 7-7-1 for Liberals, Tories and NDP, respectively.

Then I met a press colleague who has been in six of the ridings — and in several, separately, with the three leaders. He thought it would go 8-5-1-1 for Tories, Liberals, NDP, and Social Credit, in that order.

But his theme was the perilous future of Mr. Trudeau if the Liberals win only five or fewer seats.

I believe, however, that it could go hard for the Liberals — even to 12-3 for the Tories — and still Oct. 16 wouldn't be as important as the term "mini-election" makes it seem.

Is the leader of this government, with more than 60 MPs from Quebec, likely to go into the wilderness, let alone be allowed to leave by the party of "national unity"?

Not unless the byelection score is 15-0 or 14-1.

So. Bells Toll for Poet

By BERNARD NOSSITER

LONDON — The prestigious Times Literary Supplement has just hailed E.J. Thribb as a master of "minimalist clarity and compression...one of the most promising young poets at present writing in South London."

Listeners to BBC radio's weekly celebration of the arts, "Kaleidoscope," heard that Thribb's repeated use of the word "so" is "like the tolling of a great bell."

The Sunday Times, the most important weekly paper here, devoted no less than four pages of its color magazine to examples of Thribb's work, a sketch and a critique of the artist. In a boldface introduction the paper called the publication of So. Farewell Then . . .," a collection of Thribb's work, "a major literary event." The poet, who almost always signs himself "E. J. Thribb (17)," was even said to be "a front-runner for the Oxford poetry professorship."

The New Statesman, a weekly distinguished for its literary criticism as well as its socialist politics, praised the poet's ability to convey "large areas of embarrassing information. . . in that superficially laconic style which is Thribb's imprimatur."

His oeuvre, 48 poems of which 36 begin with the famous "So," have been published by Hamish Hamilton. This noted house has also printed the words of Edna St. Vincent Millay and Rod McKuen.

The whole affair, of course, is a quintessentially British gag that has run its course through wide sections of the literary establishment here. E. J. Thribb (17) is the creation of Barry Fantoni (38) and Richard Ingrams (41). Ingrams edits and Fantoni is his chief deputy at Private Eye, a satirical fortnightly that specializes in spoofs of writers and politicians.

A vintage Thribb, faintly reminiscent of e. e. cummings, goes like this:

So.
Farewell then
Chairman Mao.
You are the
Great Revolutionary Figures. You
And I
Common
Except that Like me
You were a poet.
Though how you
Found time
To write poems
In addition to
Running a country of 800 million people
Frankly.

In the land of Lewis Carroll and Edward Lear, a taste for nonsense verse is hardly surprising. What is remarkable is that some of the most important publications in this country have gleefully joined in legitimizing the joke.

Fantoni, the Private Eye parodist, has scored a considerable success "standing in" for an invariably stricken Thribb (17) at poetry readings to mostly delighted audiences in Chelsea, Hampstead and other London haunts of the literati. Fantoni claims to have packed a house at the Chelsea Arts Club where 100 persons paid £3 each to hear "So" poems for Morarji Desai, W. Somerset Maugham and Anna Ford, a lovely brunette who reads the 10 p.m. television news.

There have been only a handful of objectors. An elderly man at one Fantoni reading walked out, snorting "Rubbish."

The Sunday Times printed a letter from a man in Ashton-under-Lyme complaining that Thribb "was a joke...in questionable taste." Another, from southwest London, called the stuff "unutterable drivel."

But Private Eye readers, who have been enjoying Thribb (17) for six years, and many other Britons think that satirizing pretentious poets and critics is good fun. Why has Thribb tickled the national risibility?

Fantoni says: "I will tell you the truth simply. We do not have Jewish comedians."

And, "I think everybody enjoys a laugh in that business, the business of literary criticism. It's pretty dull stuff."

The British do delight in deflating the pompous. They also love their language, and Thribb is one way of expressing indignation over its misuse at the hands of the solemn and the professional.

Thribb is due to appear again this week in Private Eye with a poem on the death of the pope. It begins characteristically:

So.
Pope John Paul. . .

But the future of South London's most promising young poet is in doubt. On the BBC's "Kaleidoscope," editor Ingrams said that Thribb is dying. Fantoni is depressed at the thought and hopes to keep his creation alive, but editors have the last word here as elsewhere.

Ingrams did offer BBC listeners one consolation. Thribb, he said, has written his own obituary. It begins:

So.
Farewell then
E.J. Thribb

Sweden, Too, Faces Sour Times, Visitors Say

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Sweden's unemployment rate, now creeping up around the two or three per cent level, has the country's union leaders worried.

They are also concerned about the growing gulf between government and labor which is resulting in a number of wildcat strikes, an expression of workers' discontent that is unfamiliar to the Swedes.

These points were made Thursday in an interview with representatives of the Swedish equivalent of the B.C. Government Employees Union — Statstjanstemannaforbundet or ST for short.

The officials of the 120,000-member public employees' union were in Victoria as part of a provincial visit sponsored by the BCGEU, which sent its own delegation to Sweden in April.

The Swedish union leaders singled out both their country's economic problems and a change in government two years ago for the increased unemployment and changed industrial relations climate.

Sweden, they said, shares in the plight of other industrialized nations in that its economy is on the skids. Specific problem areas are in the forest, steel and shipbuilding industries.

The unemployment rate is up as high as three per cent whereas two years ago it was down below two per cent.

The unionists blame a switch in 1976 from a Social Democratic government to a more Conservative right-wing administration for the increasing number of wildcat strikes.

The Conservatives tended to veer away from the tripartite decision-sharing process of the Social Democrats which saw the government consult both labor and business before making any major moves, they said.

But ST president Gunnar Petersson said things aren't as black as some, including the country's newspapers, tend to paint them.

"We don't have any real serious problems," he said.

The Swedish union officials were entertained at a luncheon Thursday at the Empress during which NDP leader Dave Barrett and former NDP labor minister Bill King gave speeches. Following the luncheon they visited representatives of the Government Employee Relations Bureau, the agency which bargains for B.C.'s public sector employees.

ST president Gunnar Petersson said through the union's information chief Anita Osterlund that although they are concerned about rising unemployment they are pleased that the country's retraining program is also growing.

Sweden has a system whereby if a person loses his or her job he or she must take part in a retraining program in order to be eligible for unemployment payments. About four to five per cent of the work force is now being retrained.

During the interview with the Swedish delegation the following comparisons were made:

— About 85 to 90 per cent of the work force is organized compared with less than a third in Canada and about 45 per cent of B.C. workers. The Swedish public sector is almost 100 per cent organized;

— About 71 per cent of the women between the ages of 16 and 64 are employed compared with 35 per cent in Canada;

— The Swedish public sector employees work a 40-hour week compared to 37.5 for their B.C. counterparts. The Swedes have a compulsory minimum of five weeks holiday a year; B.C. workers get three weeks.

— The Swedes' average salary is between $16,000 and $17,000, whereas BCGEU general secretary John Fryer said the average for his members is about $13,000. His impression from his April visit to Sweden was that the cost of living in the two countries is about the same.

Osterlund pointed out one major difference between the two unions and that is in the area of maternity benefits.

A Swedish woman can get eight months with full-pay for maternity leave and partial payment for the ninth month. She can stay home for a year and a half and still keep her job and work part-time until the child is 12, then return to full-time work.

The husband can also share in these benefits if the wife decides to return to work after the child is born. The BCGEU contract allows six months leave without pay.

The public sector employees in Sweden have something in common with their B.C. colleagues — they are being blamed more and more for the country's economic situation. Swedish people are looking at the public sector as the reason for higher taxes and costs.

The third in a series of MB reports:

The world market is not a forest, it's a jungle. Here's how we plan to compete.

Better tools, lower costs.
In our last report, we told you that MB is spending more than $450 million over five years to streamline our facilities. We also told you why. Better tools for our employees mean lower production costs. And that's what we must have to compete effectively in international markets.

B.C. lives by exports.
There's no way Canada could ever consume all the products British Columbia's vast forests can produce. So we have to sell about 80% of them in world markets.

It's a jungle out there.
Our chief competitors are in the U.S.—the Pacific Northwest and the Southern states. They start out with an edge. Right now their labour costs are lower than ours. So are their equipment costs and taxes. The answer for us has to be improved efficiency and higher productivity, more value from each log. That's what our equipment investments are designed to achieve.

Innovation, conservation.
Some of the "hardware" we're buying applies radically new technology to save both man-hours and materials. There's a new saw linked to a computer that scans each log and automatically makes up its "mind" about the best way to cut it. One power boiler cost us $22 million —but it will save up to a quarter-million barrels of oil each year by burning low-grade wood waste.

One key to secure jobs.
The dollars, pounds, marks, francs and yen that come to B.C. in exchange for our forest products are one key to more secure jobs. Jobs not only for MB people, but for many other British Columbians.

U.K. Trade Minister Rakes Canada 'Bias'

OTTAWA (UPI) — British Trade Minister Edmund Dell said Thursday his government was unhappy with its trade relationship with Canada because federal protectionist policies discriminate against the United Kingdom.

Dell, on a week-long official visit to North America, held a series of talks Wednesday and Thursday with his Canadian counterpart Jack Horner to discuss multi-lateral trade policies.

He told a news conference Britain was unhappy with Canadian quotas on imports especially in the footwear industry.

"I don't regard our trading relationship with Canada as entirely satisfactory," Dell said. "I'd like to see a higher level of British exports to Canada.

"I would like to see Canada in certain respects conduct less protectionist policies, though I do understand perfectly the reasons for the degree of protection which is given of Canadian industry."

Dell said he was concerned that while European exports to Canada had dropped significantly in recent years, Canada has been buying even less goods and services from Britain.

"The point that I have put to the Canadian government has been the method by which these quotas seem to discriminate against exports from the United Kingdom to Canada," he said.

He said that the "prime objective" of multi-lateral trade negotiations within the European Economic Community was "to create a selective safeguard and that is among the matters that I have stressed to Canadian ministers during my visit here."

Stimulating exports by having a lower currency exchange rate in the long run only encourages other countries to the same with the inevitable result of higher inflation, Dell said.

Britain, he said, has maintained its competitive trading position over the past 18 months while sterling has appreciated against other major currencies.

"I think that it is very much better if one can be less dependent on the price factor in selling goods and services and more dependent in the quality on the goods and services that one sells," Dell said.

"If I had the choice I would choose to have an appreciating currency and maintain my competitiveness than watch my currency tending downwards."

Noranda Selling Facilities

VANCOUVER (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. reports it has reached agreement in principle to sell the mine facilities and related infrastructure of its Bell Copper Division to Granby Mining Corp. of Vancouver.

Noranda said in a news release the nearby Morrision Lake copper prospect is included in the sale which is subject to approval by the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

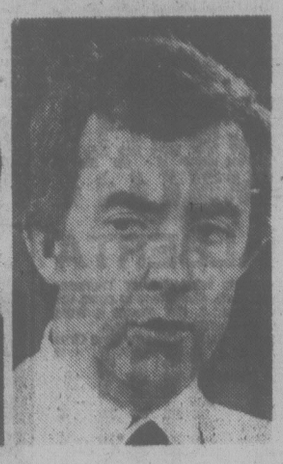
Election Talk Twitches Tory Meet

STEPHENS



CLARK

RICHMOND (CP) — Members of the Progressive Conservative Association of British Columbia begin their annual meeting today with an eye on the next federal and provincial elections.

Provincial leader Vic Stephens has scheduled a campaign workshop for provincial presidents, candidates and campaign managers Saturday, with emphasis on being prepared for the elections.

A spokesman said Stephens, who will make a major speech Saturday night, is expected to outline his platform for the provincial election. He will call for elimination of the five-per-cent sales tax and removal of the school tax from property during the first legislative session.

Federal leader Joe Clark, who is to give the keynote address during the Saturday luncheon, is expected to give his reply to the federal government's throne speech, the spokesman said.

Convention organizer Klaus Berger said he expects 300 delegates by Saturday. erger said the convention will be the best ever because "we are deliberately staying away from the good old apple pie things like the death penalty and all this kind of nonsense that is always bugging everybody."

He said the convention will be more in line with "what is happening today — people getting fed up with overblown government, too-high taxes, uemployment and what have you."

Berger said radio commentator Ed Murphy will lead a workshop called Bureaucrats — Elitists of the Country; Dr. Charles Humphries of the University of B.C. will head a MP group discussion on big government; and MP John Fraser will lead a group of MPs discussing tripartisan and labor relations.

The convention begins today with a day-long meeting of the Progressive Conservative Women's Association which will include workshops under the direction of federal candidates Pat Carney and Marg Gregory.

It will end Sunday with election of officers and regional directors.

Arsonist Sentenced

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Leonard Bertrand, 42, a former employee of the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board, was sentenced Thursday to 18 months in jail for burning down the board's offices in Matsqui last March.

Bertrand was found guilty in county court here last month. He was sentenced to 18 months on one count of breaking and entering and wilful damage and was also given a six-month concurrent term for arson.

Bertrand will also be on probation for one year when he is released from prison.

Appeal Decision Hits Tax Coffers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city could lose tax revenues totalling about $200,000 annually following a judgment Wednesday by the British Columbia Court of Appeal.

The court ruled that two stevedoring companies, both occupying National Harbors Board (NHB) facilities on the waterfront, should not be required to pay business taxes to the city.

A lawyer working on the case said the annual lost tax revenues from Casco Terminals Ltd. and Empire Stevedoring Co. Ltd. will total about $100,000 from each company.

The court said the two firms conduct their operations as independent contractors on the NHB property but do not occupy the facilites for business purposes.

The companies, which are under contract with the NHB, operate the terminals by supplying machinery and longshore labor to move cargo through the port.

The court dismissed an appeal by the city which sought to overturn an earlier judgment by the B.C. Supreme Court which exempted the two firms from liability under the business tax bylaw.

As a Crown corporation, the NHB is exempt from business tax.

Justice M. M. McFarlane, Justice J. D. Taggart and Justice J. S. Aikins held that the two firms do not occupy the NHB property for business within the bylaw's meaning.

U.S. Sailor Faces Trial for Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 20-year-old sailor from the United States was ordered Thursday to stand trial on a second-degree murder charge in connection with the death of a Vancouver woman July 28.

Ronnie Navarro of New York City was charged after Debra Joan Graham, 22, was strangled and apparently pushed from a 12th storey window of a downtown hotel.

Red Rug Out For SWAPO Members

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Socialist International organization has invited representatives of the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) to attend its 14th post-war congress here next month but the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) has not been invited.

The International, an association of 63 democratic socialist parties and organizations around the world, opens a three-day congress here Nov. 2.

The 378 delegates include French socialist Francois Mitterand, former Swedish premier Olaf Palme, Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica and former West German chancellor Willy Brandt.

Robin Sears, national secretary of the New Democratic Party which is in charge of Canadian arrangements for the congress, said Thursday he told recent plenary meetings that the NDP would not welcome PLO participation.

He said SWAPO was invited to send observers and he agreed that both organizations practise what could be called terrorism — SWAPO is waging a guerrilla war in Namibia; the PLO is fighting Israelis in the Middle East.

He said assessments are made on each organization on its merits as well as in relation to broad democratic socialist principles in deciding who is invited.

Israel's Labor party opposed the presence of PLO observers at the Vancouver congress, although Egypt's National Democratic Party will have observers here.

The theme of the congress is peace and development. The world economy, multinational corporations, disarmament, South Africa, human rights and international terrorism will be discussed.

The congress will be preceded by a two-day meeting beginning Oct. 31 of the International Council of Social Democratic Women.

SUICIDE BY FIRE

ISLAMABAD (AFP) — A supporter of former prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto has died in hospital after trying to burn himself to death last week in Rawalpindi.

It was the second recent fire-suicide by a supporter of Bhutto, who is in jail under sentence of death for ordering the killing of a political rival.

Investigator Smokes Union From Hearing

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) left a Labor Relations Board (LRB) hearing Thursday to protest the presence of a combines branch investigator and a lawyer.

UFAWU secretary-treasurer George Hewison said the union was not prepared to let the combines branch, which has been investigating the UFAWU for more than two years, use a LRB hearing to gather more information for its case.

The Pacific Gillnetters Association (PGA) is asking the LRB for a cease and desist order against an alleged blacklist of non-union fishermen, who fished during a five-day strike this summer.

The PGA says union members have refused to buy fish, sell ice or handle the nets of about 50 of the association members on the so-called scab list.

Hewison said he feared the hearing would "give the combines access to information to take another strip off our backs."

LRB chairman Don Munroe and vice-chairman Rod Germaine said they were unhappy that lawyer Arthur MacLennan and investigator Simon Wapniarski did not give advance notice of their appearance.

Germaine told the union and PGA that although LRB hearings are normally public, the board can see situations when the presence of persons not involved in the proceedings in a direct sense might be an inhibiting force and LRB would consider a request to have them expelled.

Hewison said the union, which has been fighting to have in-camera combines hearings made public, is not interested in having a private LRB hearing.

MacLennan told the LRB he is carrying out a watching brief for a client, he refused to name. He recently prosecuted seven union members for impeding a combines hearing in 1976 by attempting to have it made public. Two fishermen were found guilty and fined $350.

JUST VISITOR; NOT 'NAPPER'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leah Ann Slemmer told the British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday that she had no part in a kidnapping that went wrong last May 12.

She said she was shocked when two male friends carrying something entered the basement of the Vancouver dwelling she was visiting and moments later she saw a person standing up in a trunk.

Mr. Justice George Murray was told that Heather Haley, wife of a bank manager, was taken in a van from her home in suburban Delta. She was bound, gagged, blindfolded and stuffed into a trunk and was released unharmed four hours later in a Vancouver lane when her abductors muffed their chance to pick up a $100,000 ransom from her husband when they gave him wrong drop directions.

Mrs. Haley was unable to identify her abductors.

Charged with Mrs. Slemmer are Emil Mantha, Leslie McKinney — also of Washington — and Dino Pitton.

Both McKinney and Mrs. Slemmer were said to have been seen in Delta in a van May 12 but both gave evidence denying the Crown allegations.

Mantha and Pitton, through their lawyers, elected Thursday not to give defence evidence.

Mrs. Slemmer said she came to Vancouver with Mantha about four days prior to May 12 before going back to Everett, Wash., to face sentence for her robbery conviction there.

She said the other accused were in the dwelling where she was staying in Vancouver, that she became suspicious when she was asked to write certain names and addresses — which turned out to include the Haley name and address and which police later recovered — on pieces of paper.

She said she knew something was up when the accused would stop talking among themselves whenever she entered a room they were in.

RCMP Denies Secret Language Policy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP Thursday denied reports that it has adopted a secret policy to hire unilingual francophone applicants before unilingual anglophones, saying they stem from an internal memo that was later clarified.

The issue arose after Tom Siddon, Progressive Conservative candidate for the federal byelection in the nearby Burnaby-Richmond-Delta riding, said the RCMP judges applicants on the basis of language spoken.

He said the information is contained in a Sept. 1 letter from Vancouver RCMP headquarters to prospective recruits that sets out hiring policies.

Supt. John Bentham of the force's liaison branch in Ottawa said that in an effort to re-articulate its policy favoring bilingual recruits, the force sent a letter to various regional headquarters.

He said the memo should have made it clear that the RCMP still gives preference to bilingual candidates, but then equally considers candidates who are unilingual French or English.

Several regions questioned the original memo, he said, after which Ottawa headquarters clarified it.

By that time the letter from Vancouver headquarters cited by Siddon had gone to all recruits who applied at that office, he Bentham said.

Recruits were told in the letter that as a result of a language policy change, bilingual or francophone recruits could have a shorter waiting period than the usual 10 months before reporting to Regina for basic training.

Anglophones could be extended beyond that period, the letter said.

Journalists Restricted

TBILISI (AFP) — Journalists covering the 1980 Olympic Games in the Soviet Union will be confined to the cities where the events are to take place, a representative of the Soviet Union Olympic Committee reported.

Replying to a question posed at a meeting of local sporting organizations, the representative explained that foreign journalists would have freedom of movement within the major centres, but not in the rest of the country.

The five host venues are Moscow, where most of the games are to be held, Tallin, where the yachting is to be held, and Leningrad, Kiev and Minsk, which will stage the early rounds of the football competition.

Nielsen Won't Act On Chlorine Report

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Wednesday following a tour of the Hooker Chemicals plant here that he plans no action on a report which forecast that an accident could release toxic substances at the plant.

The report by Beak Consultants said an earthquake strong enough to rupture Hooker's chlorine storage facilities is statistically likely every 30 years and a major railcar accident involving chlorine is statisically likely once in 25 years.

The company owned and manufactured the chlorine gas which spilled from a truck onto a downtown street last month, injuring about 78 persons.

Nielsen said there might be a statistical possibility that a 747 aircraft could crash on Vancouver and that there was little anyone could do about it.

He said he has no plans to commission a report on the chlorine industry, adding that the transport ministry is responsible for the trucking of hazardous material and the labor department for areas where chlorine might affect citizens or workers.

Weather 'Eyes' Given Awards

Certificates of merit were presented Thursday to two volunteer weather observers and Canadian Industries Ltd. on James Island for keeping a record of regional climates over many years.

The presentation was made by Gil Smith, officer in charge of climate regional data at the Gonzales Observatory.

The observers are Albert C. Phillips of 5146 Santa Clara, who has operated a small weather station at his home for 20 years, and Dave Crow of James Island, who looked after the CIL records for 13 years.

There are about 20 volunteer weather observers in the Victoria area and more than 350 in province.

They supply weather offices with daily temperatures and precipitation.

This enables the local weather offices to determine regional climates which in some areas differ widely.

Live-Shell Dive in Lake

Four divers from Canadian Forces Base Chilliwack are doing a survey of the bottom of Kalamalka Lake in search of live mortar shells, a spokesman for the Canadian Forces said Thursday.

Lt.-Cmdr. Dick Pepper said they will be joined by four more divers from CFB Esquimalt who will be equipped with metal detectors. The teams will also examine the lake bottom for weeds.

HACKING, HEWING DAYS ARE DONE

HOMER, Ill. (AP) — No more hacking away at frozen ground for twin brothers Jack and Tom Bear. And no more digging in the scorching summer sun. The 71-year-old gravediggers are hanging up their shovels after 21 years in the cemetery.

"We've worked for better than half a day just digging the frozen ground out," Jack said. "It gets kinda cold on your thumbs."

But there are rewards.

"You think, well, that's all a poor guy can get," Jack said. "That's the last he gets. It makes you feel pretty good that he had a good grave and a good funeral . . . that we've always had the grave ready and they've never had to wait for us."

She Will Be Autographing Her New Book

RATTENBURY

This book is the biography of Francis Mawson Rattenbury, British Columbia's most famous architect, designer of the Parliament Buildings, the Empress Hotel, the Crystal Gardens, the Vancouver Courthouse, numerous banks, public buildings and fine houses. He was also an entrepreneur, land speculator, town planner, politician and a flamboyant self promoter. His dealings with contractors and other architects with whom he shared commissions were charged with controversy, and his correspondence from these disputes makes fascinating reading.

His private life for a time became so notorious that he was ostracized by Victorian society and he retired to England. There he was murdered by his second wife's lover. This resulted in a spectacular trial which led to the conviction of the murderer and suicide of his wife.

Terry Reksten has done her research well, and in the tradition of the great women historians, Cecil Woodham-Smith, Elizabeth Longford and Barbara Tuchman has produced a most readable and entertaining biography.

EDWARD WARD HARRIS FORCASTS THAT "RATTENBURY IS DESTINED TO BECOME A RUNAWAY BEST SELLER, AND DESERVEDLY SO."

If you are unable to attend, you may phone ahead and reserve your autographed copy. Yates St. 382-2464, Market Square 382-1322.

A Laid-Back Dylan Warm In Toronto

Dylan on stage in Toronto

TORONTO — If 1978 has been a particularly hard year for Bob Dylan, the singer wasn't showing any strain Thursday night at Maple Leaf Gardens.

In previous years a Dylan concert would emphasize the music with little, if any, rapport with the audience. But the Thursday-night crowd saw the singer dispensing light, easy prattle, and even "mugging it" during the tune Mister Jones, juggling the hand mike and performing a mock tune-up of the soloing guitarist's instrument.

Dylan's road schedule this year would be a strain on any act. He spent February and March touring Australia, New Zealand and Japan; delighted European fans throughout the summer, and on Sept. 15 he undertook his most extensive tour ever — 65 concerts in 62 North American cities — which runs to Dec. 16.

Besides the exhaustive concert itinerary, Dylan has faced several personal and professional blows in the last year.

In December, 1977, his wife Sara was granted custody of their four children in a bitter and prolonged divorce case. Then, Dylan's loosely-autobiographical feature film, Renaldo and Clara, was a critical and commercial flop.

The latest shot came when Dylan's current album, Street-Legal, was generally panned by critics. It was the singer's first studio album since 1975 (Desire) — his '76 release Hard Rain was a live-in-concert recording — and the critics weren't ready for the noteable change in sound.

On Thursday night, Dylan obviously was out to please himself and his audience. The fans came to hear Dylan the Legend, who has weathered changes from strict folk music to rock, to country-rock, to whatever one wants to label his current sound.

He pleased the crowd with many of his old hits, but he pleased himself by introducing a more upbeat, electric sound to his previously sedate style.

His current band, featured during this tour, adds a new and exciting depth to the singer's act. The same musicians performed on Street-Legal, but their vibrancy did not pass the studio mixing board. The problem may lie in a rushed product, or it may be the fact that Dylan's new company was just too new to work comfortably with their leader.

Angie Dickinson

From Police Woman to Ex-Con

TORONTO — Angie Dickinson, who found success as Sgt. Pepper Anderson, television's leggy, crime-fighting Police Woman, is returning to the movies in The Labyrinth, a Canadian-French production being filmed in and around Montreal.

Co-produced by Denis Heroux of Montreal and French film-maker Andre Mnouchkine, the movie is billed as a romantic thriller with Miss Dickinson as a ex-convict from the United States who decides to make a new start in Canada.

Although she speaks almost no French, Miss Dickinson says she is getting along well with the predominately French-Canadian film crew and admits a special affection for the flavor of Montreal.

Ten weeks of filming began Sept. 5 and the movie is expected to be released next summer.

London Statue For Charlie Group's Goal

LONDON — A public appeal for cash "from ordinary people" has been launched to pay for a statue of Charlie Chaplin in his native southern London. A model of the statue by sculptor John Doubleday depicts Chaplin in familar garb: bowler hat, short jacket, baggy pants and big boots, and leaning on a bowed cane. Illtyd Harrington, deputy leader of the Greater London Council, wants the statue unveiled by next spring in time for what would have been Chaplin's 90th birthday. Chaplin, who made a fortune in Hollywood movies and was knighted in 1975, died at his Swiss mansion Christmas Day 1977.

LAS VEGAS - Andy Williams says it isn't so — he and ex-wife Claudine Longet haven't made up and they're not living together in Los Angeles. Fumes Williams: "That report has caused me nothing but aggravation." He says he and Claudine still are friends — he gave her prominent moral support throughout her trial in Colorado for killing her lover, skier Spider Sabich. But he adds, "My relationship with Claudine is the same now as it was when we were divorced. I see her when I see the kids. There has been no reconciliation." He brands the report to the contrary "irresponsible journalism" — says the columnist who wrote it never spoke with him.

Annie's Expecting

TORONTO — Anne Murray and her television producer husband Bill Langstroth, are expecting their second child in early April. According to a spokesman, Anne will work until the end of February, take six months off and return to the U.S. concert and nightclub circuit next September.

FitzPatrick Firing Made Official by Aldermen

Victoria's chief personnel director Terry FitzPatrick is officially without a job today after city council voted Thursday to dismiss him from his $30,000-a-year post.

FitzPatrick was told about 10 days ago he was through but the axe could not officially fall until Thursday night's regular council meeting.

Only Ald. Larry Ryan and Ald. Robin Blencoe voted against the motion to dismiss FitzPatrick.

The two aldermen have stated they oppose the firing because of the way in which it was handled. The two object to city hall using a management consultant to deal with internal matters.

FitzPatrick was fired after Vancouver management consultants Gordon Newhouse and Associates completed a review of the personnel department.

No reasons have been given for the firing and council members refuse comment on the matter — but it has been learned that shortly before he was dismissed FitzPatrick had a disagreement with Newhouse.

The argument occurred over a long-standing practice FitzPatrick had of giving out information from confidential files to the company that publishes B.C. city directories.

Newhouse was in FitzPatrick's outer office when the personnel chief approved a request from B.C. Directories to get names, addresses and occupations out of city hall files.

Sources say Newhouse strongly objected to the practice but FitzPatrick rejected the consultant's advice. Newhouse then reported the matter to Mayor Mike Young who later wrote a harsh letter to FitzPatrick ordering that no information be given out from the files except to authorized people.

FitzPatrick was dismissed about a week later. He had been with the city for 31 years and was due to retire in five.

Sources say the personnel files incident was one of the factors contributing to council's decision to dismiss the personnel chief.

FitzPatrick said last week that he is considering taking the city to court but any final decision would have to wait until after his firing was made official.

City manager James Bramley has been directed by council to work out the terms of settlement with FitzPatrick, but he has not yet done so.

One Prop Was In Reverse AirWest Crash Probe Finds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal investigators have found that one of the propellers on the AirWest Twin Otter plane which crashed here Sept. 2, killing 11 persons, was in reverse, a Transport Canada spokesman said Thursday.

Ken Owen, chief of the airworthiness branch, said it is not yet known how the propeller got that way but it could have reversed when it hit the water.

He said, however, there is no evidence yet that the crash, which killed the pilot, cabin attendant and nine Japanese tourists, was due to mechanical malfunction.

Owen said he issued an international alert 10 days ago to pilots and owners of de Havilland Twin Otter aircraft because of the possibility the port engine propeller of the ill-fated plane went into reverse pitch in flight.

The international alert is the first one issued by Transport Canada on the Twin Otter but advisories have been issued on other planes during investigations, Owen said.

Steve Ryback, Transport Canada public affairs manager for the Pacific region, said the propellers are in Tranport Canada laboratories in Ottawa, the engines are in Montreal for tests by the manufacturer and the remaining wreckage is here.

"The question the investigators are trying to determine is was it a mechanical misfunction," Ryback said. "Did the pilot override the system or did the backup fail-safe system fail?"

He said the results of the investigations are expected to be known in late January or early February.

Owen said the alert he issued warns Twin Otter pilots not to go below flight idle speed and to be sure to check the Beta backup system prior to each flight because it affords additional protection should anything go wrong.

NDP Booklet Sears Socreds

The NDP is countering Social Credit's Operation Doorstep with a province-wide propaganda campaign of its own.

Some 350,000 copies of the NDP pamphlet Some Straight Talk About What's Happening to B.C. will be distributed door-to-door throughout the province by party volunteers over the next month.

The 16-page NDP booklet asks readers to compare the promises and performance of the Socred government.

It lists a number of 1975 campaign pledges it says the Socreds either failed to keep or turned around and did the opposite.

The second half of the book compares unemployment, job creation and similar statistics under the former NDP and current Socred regimes.

Added performance and driving comfort: The new Fiat Brava has a 2-litre engine, plush velour interior and delivers 62 km per gal. on the highway†.

If you're considering a Volvo, Saab, Peugeot, BMW or Audi

Test drive the luxurious 1979 Fiat Brava 2-Litre. Discover the value Fiat offers for around $7,000.*

Fiat is famed for efficient cars—excellent performance, economy, driveability. Now—with the 1979 Brava, Fiat's famous twin cam engine with 2-litre performance is right in the same league with imported cars costing hundreds, even thousands more.

Plush velour interior. Amazingly quiet.

And backed by a unique combination of reliability warranties that hold down the long-term cost of owning your car.

European cars in the 2-litre category have a well-deserved reputation for driver control, ride and sophisticated engineering.

But the prices! Now Fiat engineers introduce a high order of clever engineering, superb ride, lush interior finish with 2-litre power *for around $7,000.

Over the years Fiat engineers have pioneered in squeezing efficiency out of engines for Europe where gasoline prices are sky high. Now the same engineering expertise has been put to work to develop the new Brava 2-Litre: twin overhead cams milk the optimum power from the engine; handling is responsive through rack and pinion steering, McPherson Strut suspension and power assisted brakes. It's all put together with Fiat's skill at getting high performance without costing you an arm and a leg.

Fiat protects the new-car buyer's pocketbook with two remarkable reliability warranties:

1. Fiat was the first import to offer the three-year, corrosion perforation warranty.

2. Two-year (or 40,000 km) power train warranty: Fiat engineers are so sure of the dependability of the Brava engine and drive train, that Fiat has covered them with a warranty for two years (or 40,000 km, whichever comes first).

Ford Now Losing Suits Over Mustang, Lincoln

Associated Press

Ford Motor Co., already under fire from critics in the United States who allege that its Pinto cars explode when hit in the rear, has new troubles involving its Mustang II and Lincoln Continental.

In Los Angeles, Calif., a Superior Court jury Thursday awarded $11.5 million to a suburban Sherman Oaks man who says the brakes of a 1966 Lincoln Continental failed, leading to a crash in which he suffered brain damage.

And in Portland, Ore., a defence lawyer in a manslaughter case is arguing that a Mustang II, not the defendant, caused the fiery death of a woman in a two-car collision.

Under government pressure, Ford has recalled 1.5 million 1971-76 Pinto sedans and 30,000 1975-76 Mercury Bobcat sedans to correct fuel tank problems.

In the California case, a jury of nine women and three men handed down the verdict eight years after Jack Hasson filed suit on behalf of his then 19-year-old son James, who, the suit claimed, smashed into a centre divider and ornamental fountain on Mount Olympic Drive in Hollywood Hills.

His lawyers said the car's brakes were defectively designed and manufactured when purchased four years before the accident. The lawyers also contended that Ford was aware of the brake problem in Continental models.

The younger Hasson was awarded $7.5 million in general damages and $4 million in punitive damages by the jury. His father was granted $70,000 in additional damages for medical expenses.

Ford lawyer H. R. Nolte indicated the awards will be appealed. ". . . we believe the jury's award is contrary to the weight of the evidence and that it will not be upheld," he said.

In the Oregon case, Lan Ngoc Huynh, 24, is charged with second-degree manslaughter in the traffic death of Virginia Fuhrmann, 29, last May. Huynh's car collided with the rear end of Mrs. Fuhrmann's 1976 Mustang, which burst into flames.

"There were no other injuries to the woman that would have caused her death except for the burns," public defender Linda Eyerman said.

The defence asked the court to order Ford to produce rear-end crash test results involving Ford Pintos and Mustangs.

Ford was ordered Thursday to respond to inquiries in the Oregon case by Nov. 3.

Officials at Ford's headquarters in Dearborn, Mich., have no immediate comment on the Portland case.

Mexican Airports Hobbled

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A strike by air traffic controllers curtailed commercial flights in Mexico for the seventh day Thursday and officials said no end to the walkout was in sight.

Mexico's 950 air controllers, weather forecasters and communicators walked out Oct. 5 after the government folded the company they worked for and tried to force them into transportation department's union. This would have meant losses in wages, seniority and other benefits.

Mexico's two major airlines, Aeromexico and Mexicana, have reduced flights to allow foreign airlines to operate normally, although no planes are allowed to take off or land between 9 p.m. and 9 a.m.

Eighty-two air controllers are working — 70 short of the 150 needed to man the country's airports.

Tourism $$ Forthcoming

The provincial government will match $25 million being put up by Ottawa for low-cost loans to improve B.C. tourist facilities, Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy said Thursday.

None of the cash will be spent on Lower Vancouver Island or in the Vancouver area on the mainland.

Details of the agreement are expected to be announced next week when B.C. Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, Marcel Lessard, minister of the federal department of regional expansion (DREE), and B.C. MPs meet in Vancouver to sign the deal.

Mrs. McCarthy said that under conditions set out by DREE, the money will not go towards projects in the lower Vancouver Island or Vancouver area.

She said the funds will be allocated in outlying areas for development of tourist industry facilities, community infrastructure systems to connect resort areas and expansion of ski resort facilities.

The minister said the province has earmarked as priority areas proposals for $8 million worth of ski lifts on Blackcomb Mountain at Whistler, to go along with a town centre and other resort development and upgrading of the 20-year-old hot springs near Terrace.

However, she did not say definitely whether money will go towards the developments.

Under the Whistler scheme, the province will be responsible for building an $800,000 road from the centre to the new base area, while the ski developer will put in a lift between the two places.

"We have probably the best potential for ski resort development in North America, if not the world," Mrs. McCarthy said.

Terrace Mayor David Maroney said the municipality would like the provincial government to buy the hot springs area and either take over responsibility for development or lease it out.

He said the recreational property available includes space for a golf course and major ski hill. The land was originally developed in 1957 and was up for sale several years ago for $3 million.

Smith's Plan Is a Sham, Moderate Tells Americans

By JOHN GOSHKO
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In 20 years of service with Rhodesia's security forces, Allan Savory became known as an innovative expert on the tactics of combatting the black guerrillas fighting against white minority rule of that southern Africa country.

Now, Savory is playing a different role. At present, he's in Washington trying to warn the American public not to believe Prime Minister Ian Smith's argument that his plan for a transition to black majority rule is the only way to save Rhodesia from Marxism.

"Smith's plan is a sham," Savory said in an interview here. "It's an unrealistic attempt to preserve white control behind a facade of black rule; and, as such, it can only lead to increased civil war and bloodshed in Rhodesia."

In an effort to get that message across, Savory and two associates — all of them leaders of the moderate white opposition to Smith within Rhodesia — have been dogging the prime minster's footsteps during his controversial visit to seek U.S. support for his transitional government.

"Mr. Smith has stressed endlessly that the American people should give him a fair hearing," Savory said. "It's ironic to hear him appeal for a fair hearing in America when, in his own country, opponents of his policies have been denied a hearing for their views for more than 10 years."

"We would implore American interviewers to ask Smith the questions which he avoids answering in Rhodesia," Savory added.

The questions he then enumerates all involve the contention that Smith is a white supremacist who has used dictatorial methods to stifle any meaningful opposition in Rhodesia, who has watered down promises to end racial discrimination to the point where they are meanihgless and who is manoeuvring through docile black leaders to keep the real power in Rhodesia in white hands.

These charges are made by a man who formerly was a major architect of the campaign to beat back Rhodesia's black nationalists through the use of military force and who served for several years as a member of the coalition of deputies supporing Smith in the Rhodesian parliament.

"It was precisely because of that experience that I became convinced Smith was wrong," Savory said.

"I came to realize that we couldn't solve Rhodesia's problems militarily," he said.

"The tide of black nationalism is too strong to be beaten with arms. I saw that if we kept following reactionary, politically incompetent ideas, we would lose in the end. So I crossed over."

For Savory, that meant becoming president of the National Unifying Force, a coalition of the moderate and left-of-center white political parties opposing Smith. He admits that his coalition has the sympathy of only about 50,000 of Rhodesia's whites, while most of the remaining 200,000 still support Smith and his hard-line policies.

But, Savory insisted, "The thing for which we stand — genuine free elections for all Rhodesians without white manipulation — is the position supported by the overwhelming majority of the country's five million blacks."

Smith, charging that the Patriotic Front's front's leaders, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, are allied with Marxist forces, has refused to deal with them. Instead, he has moved, in conjunction with three internal black leaders, to implement his own plan for moving Rhodesia to what he claims will be majority black rule.

"It's folly bordering on madness to believe that you can have a successful transition without the cooperation of the Patriotic Front," Savory said. "Whether you like them or not, they have too much support among the blacks to be ignored."

KISSINGER

SMITH

Give It a Chance, Henry K. Argues

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, rebuffed by the Carter administration, Thursday won some important words of sympathy from former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for Smith's plan to move Rhodesia to majority black rule.

Kissinger's support, although qualified, still put him at odds with the Carter administration on a major foreign policy issue for the first time since he left office two years ago.

His stance represented a considerable victory for Smith, who is in the United States desperately seeking American support for his embattled government. So far, Kissinger is the only widely respected and authoritative voice in the U.S. foreign policy arena to say a kind word in Smith's behalf.

After meeting with Smith, Kissinger told reporters that Smith appears to be trying to move toward free elections for all Rhodesians with his so-called "internal-settlement" plan, and added: "I think we should test that process.

"I'm not saying we should support the internal settlement," Kissinger noted. "I'm saying we should give his approach an opportunity."

That was in marked contrast to the position taken by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance in a meeting with Smith on Monday. Vance reiterated the Carter administration's belief that Smith's plan is inadequate to resolve the strife between Rhodesia's black majority and white minority.

Meanwhile, Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, two of three moderate black members on Rhodesia's ruling executive council, arrived in New York today from Johannesburg.

Muzorewa and Chirau plan to meet in New York later today with Rhodesian white Prime Minister Ian Smith and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, the council's other black member.

Smith and U.S. state department officials are squabbling over conditions that would govern an all-parties conference to guide Rhodesia's transition to black majority rule.

Both sides insist they are ready to talk with "no preconditions." Both also insist that the other side is setting unacceptable conditions as a requirement for negotiations.

Copter Retrieves Climbers' Bodies

SEATTLE (AP) — A four-hour evacuation effort Thursday resulted in the recovery of the bodies of two experienced climbers killed in a fall in the North Cascade mountains.

Lloyd M. Wilson, 25, and David P. Hedrick, 28, both of Seattle, were killed in a 150-metre fall Sunday.

Sheriff's department spokesmen said favorable weather conditions allowed a helicopter to land near a crevasse at the 2,500-metre level of Forbidden Peak. The bodies were taken to Sedro Woolley, deputies said.

Recovery attempts nearly killed a Navy medic Monday, when Lt. Ed Robson was lowered within three metres of the bodies. He was quickly pulled out of the area when the sides of the crevasse threatened to cave in because of turbulence from helicopter.

BANDLEADER'S SON LINKED TO SNAKING

Marines," which trained in commando tactics and martial arts such as karate. Synanon representatives have said in recent years that the group's self-contained communities have arsenals of guns for self defence.

The ex-members said Kenton "was known to have an interest in snakes, he caught them and handled them often" at the Badger ranch, the Times said.

"Lance was a bright leader type, a real lanatic," one of them told the newspaper.

"All I would see Lance do for months at a time was practise martial arts, punching and kicking in the air. He wasn't saying much. The Imperial Marines didn't talk much to the rest of the community.

"They tried to build a mystique around them."

Synanon's chief legal officer, Dan Garrett, said the group bears no responsibility for the attack and helped police locate Kenton and Musico, who surrendered on Synanon property, accompanied by a Synanon attorney.

Priest Jailed 2 Years

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — Gaston Tremblay, head of the Apostles of Infinite Love, a dissident Roman Catholic sect, was sentenced to two years in prison today for forcibly detaining two children.

Mr. Justice Jean-Guy Boilard of Quebec Superior Court, in a lengthy written verdict, said he was taking into account the nearly six months the spiritual leader spent in jail awaiting trial.

Crown prosecutor Raymond Faucher said he had received a copy of an appeal of the verdict.

Tremblay, 49, known as Father Jean-de-la-Trinite by his followers, was found guilty Oct. 3 after a jury deliberated 10 hours.

Credit Charges Chopped

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A standby credit arrangement between the government and chartered banks has been renegotiated to reduce interest charges against the federal treasury, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Thursday.

The changes were proposed by the chartered banks in a move evidently aimed at keeping the arrangement competitive with international markets.

Last fall, the government arranged the $2.5 billion U.S. standby credit with the banks as a reserve which could be used, if necessary, to defend the dollar. The banks charge interest on the unused portion of the credit as well as the portion borrowed.

As of Sept. 30, the government had used $1.1 billion U.S. of the credit.

The fee charged on the undrawn portion of the credit facility has been reduced to one-quarter of one per cent fron three-eights of a per cent.

Also, charges payable to the banks on out-standing advances drop to one-half of a per cent per year. The charge was originally set at five-eights of a per cent for the first three years, rising to three-quarters of a per cent thereafter.

Chretien also told the Commons Thursday that Canada will have a record trade surplus this year.

He predicted it would be substantially above the $2.9 billion figure of last year.

A denial by Chretien that the Bank of Canada plans an increase in the prime lending rate did not stop rumors Thursday as the value of the dollar jumped by one third of a cent since the day before.

After losing nearly one U.S. cent over the past two days, the dollar took an upturn on international currency exchanges, closing at 84.52 U.S. cents.

At noon EDT today, however, the Canadian dollar was down 9-100 at $0.8443 in New York trading.

600 Victoria Jobs In Ferries Project

will be split between Victoria and Vancouver but said full tendering procedures will be carried out before it is decided which company will get the job.

Tenders will be called on construction of the two jumbo ferries for delivery by the summer of 1981.

They will be sisters to the Cowichan and Coquitlam Queen three-tiered vessels now on the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run.

They will have a capacity of 350 cars and 1,500 passengers.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, responsible for the B.C. Ferry Corp. said whether or not Yarrows of Victoria gets any of the work depends on negotiations during the letting of the contracts.

The government is also looking at a third aspect of the ferries project — the conversion of the Sunshine Coast Queen to a truck ferry of the Alberni type.

If this project is given the go-ahead, it will cost a further $[illegible] million.

It's unlikely that any of the jumbos will be used on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run because the double level loading terminals are already constructed on the Departure Bay-Horseshoe Bay run.

But putting two more jumbos on the more northerly route will free more of the super-stretch models for the southern route.

Bennett said the contracts will provide a continuity of employment for the industry while it awaits federal defense conracts "which we expect will be forthcoming for B.C. shipyards in the early 1980s."

Bennett said the ferries are an essential service to the Island and the sunshine coast.

"The ferry service must expand if these communities are to continue to grow and realize their potential," the premier said.

Bawlf said the present fleet carried a record 85,000 vehicles and 2.6 million people during July, August and September this year.

"Continued growth of ferry traffic, rapid expansion of tourism and industry, completion next spring of the North Island Highway to Port Hardy and the new north coast ferry terminal are all factors which point to an economic boom for Vancouver Island," Bawlf said.

Deejays' Holiday Jaunts Under Taxman's Scrutiny

Revenue Canada is investigating promotional trips taken by radio announcers and disc jockeys because the trips should be declared as income, a department spokesman said Thursday.

Pat Trew said the investigation is an off-shoot of an investigation into possible illegal kickbacks and commissions paid to travel agents by Canadian airlines.

Several tickets were traced back to radio stations in Toronto and Vancouver, she said, but there is no concerted effort to look at radio stations.

John Ansell, station manager at CJVI in Victoria, said that all radio stations in Victoria have had discussions with Revenue Canada officials about the matter.

The trips are no vacation because the personalities become tour guides, handle baggage and even provide first aid, he said.

Ted Smith, station manager for Vancouver radio station CKNW, said taxation officials visited his station last summer to go through records from the last two or three years to see how many free trips have been taken.

Smith said he did not know if any announcers have received back tax notices, but the station has issued extra income declaration slips just to be on the safe side.

Tours are generally initiated by tour companies who ask for personalities to advertise and host them, he added.

In four kindergartens not unlike this one, an intriguing experiment is under way

New screening program in four city kindergartens will pinpoint the bright youngsters and detect potential problem children

Spotting The Leaders And the Followers

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

An experimental screening project in Greater Victoria School District will try to identify future straight A students and potential problem children while they are still in kindergarten.

A pilot project in four unnamed kindergartens will determine — with special testing — the bright children, and those who are average or slow with learning disabilities, administrators believe.

The school district-developed program started last month, says instruction supervisor Janice Sarkissian.

She said a separate education ministry-sponsored project will start in two other district kindergartens in four or five weeks.

The ministry is contributing $10,400 a year toward the project. Eight other school districts will also participate.

Individual development levels will be measured in a series of exercises which include tests of visual perception and communication skills, Sarkissian said.

The screening process will bring to light individual weaknesses and strengths.

It won't be used to segregate children.

The long-range goal is to provide elementary school teachers with information to tailor teaching methods to suit individual needs.

The core curriculum will be used as the framework.

"It's just another way of individualizing the programs for each student," she said.

In a brief to the school board, assistant superintendent Bernie Chandlers said all four kindergarten classes will be tested in October and November to pick out the very bright and those who appear to be the opposite.

"It can be expected that out of every 100 kindergarten children 15 will indicate extreme brightness and 15 extreme slowness," Chandler's brief said.

Two classes, called the control group, will then revert to normal teaching methods.

The other two kindergarten classes will become the experimental group.

Bright children in the experimental group will enter formal Grade 1 work in January and February under more challenging programs.

Children in the experimental group diagnosed as slow will get additional preparation before entering elementary school and specialized instruction after they start Grade 1.

The progress of all four classes will be monitored constantly and a formal evaluation will take place when they finish Grade 1.

James Bay Beats Back Developers

Any developers looking at James Bay for future projects got a clear indication Thursday that community groups in that neighborhood are a force to be reckoned with.

Two James Bay citizen organizations packed the public gallery at Victoria city hall Thursday night and bent council's collective ear for about two hours decrying a pair of development proposals.

Both projects were later rejected by council.

The heat was applied by the James Bay Residents' League and the James Bay Community Association. The groups were opposed to a plan by Daon Development Corporation to build 23 single family homes at Boyd and Luxton, and to a proposal by a private individual to build a single duplex on a small Dallas Road lot.

The Daon project drew the most fire.

Residents told council the project was too dense to be acceptable by the community. Several speakers said a toned-down proposal of about 16 or 17 units might find favor.

Members of the two groups also said a development on the site would be acceptable if the land was rezoned duplex and 10 double units or less were built.

Mayor Mike Young suggested to council the matter be tabled until after a public hearing on another James Bay proposal had taken place.

Council rejected the mayor's proposal, however, and turned down the Daon project in its present form.

Council also rejected an application by an individual who wanted to build a duplex at 264-268 Dallas. Residents said the lot was nearly 2,000 square feet short of the required minimum for duplexes and a building permit for the site would set a bad precedent.

BREWERIES TO SHARE LOSS
B.C. Beer Flows Tuesday

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

B.C. beer will be back in large volumes next week and three major breweries have agreed to share any losses incurred by liquor stores on U.S. beer not sold by late November.

As a result of this decision:

— B.C. brands will be available in all Victoria stores by Tuesday afternoon.

— Remaining stocks of U.S. beer will continue to be sold and at the same price as Canadian beer.

— About 55 employees of Labatt's in Victoria will return to work on Monday.

R.A. Wallace, general manager of the liquor distribution branch, said it was concern about brewery layoffs that led to the decision to resume large-scale orders of B.C. beer.

Liquor stores can begin placing orders Monday and supplies should arrive in Victoria stores by Tuesday afternoon. Under a new system, stores can order as much as they need on a daily basis instead of placing orders only once a week.

Almost 500,000 dozen cases of U.S. beer are still in stock and the LDB hopes much of it will be sold.

As it has a shelf life of at least 90 days, it will be good until at least late November.

At that time, Wallace said, remaining U.S. stocks will either be returned to the U.S. or dumped.

If U.S. beer must be dumped, the cost will be shared by Labatt's, Carlings and Molsons, the three major B.C. breweries.

Wallace said more U.S. beer could be sold if Canadian beer was withheld from the market for a few more weeks but this would create economic hardships for breweries and their employees.

Therefore the ban on large-scale orders of B.C. beers will be ended Monday.

On the same day, Labatt's of Victoria will resume full production, although only one packaging shift will be needed.

Labatt's laid off 80 of its 100 employees one week ago with the remaining 20 doing maintenance work. By resuming full production, the staff level will rise to 75 on Monday.

The remaining 25, members of a second packaging shift, will be rehired as soon as demand increases.

Local manager R.A. Mussett said this might be several weeks.

Although supplies of B.C. beer will no longer be limited, some stores may be able to order only small amounts because of storage problems created by stocks of U.S. beer.

But in any urban area, the general supply of B.C. beer probably will exceed the demand.

There is no plan to reduce the price on U.S. beer despite the surplus.

New Life Given Weatherships

The Pacific weatherships Vancouver and Quadra will remain on the job as long as they are needed to ensure shipping safety.

The announcement by Treasury Board president Robert Andras in Ottawa Thursday virtually eliminates any early phase-out of the ships, whose home base is in Victoria.

Andras said proposals to take the ships out of service, thereby placing 150 jobs in jeopardy, will be carried out only if "replacement technology" is available.

Answering questions from Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative MP Donald Munro, Andras said a careful review will be made by the government before any final act is taken.

The proposed phasing-out of the two ships brought a storm of protest from fishermen and meteorological spokesmen.

Few in Saanich Knock Council Pay Increases

Only a few Saanich taxpayers have complained about the proposed salary increases for council members.

And Mayor Mel Couvelier believes these are mostly instant reactions based on incomplete facts.

Couvelier said Thursday he has received about half a dozen telephone calls and letters from residents objecting to the proposed increases of about 18 per cent in his salary and 22 per cent for the nine aldermen.

The salary boost will be effective Jan. 1, 1979, if council accepts the finance committee recommendation.

Couvelier said the callers seemed unaware of some of the basic background facts concerning council remuneration.

For example, they had little understanding of the salaries paid in other administrations.

Couvelier has undertaken to send them copies of the material he prepared for the finance committee, showing Saanich figures in relation to those paid by eight other B.C. municipalities.

Couvelier, mayor of a municipality with 73,383 population, now earns $18,626 and the proposed raise would boost him to $22,014.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young (city population 62,551) gets $23,361. His counterpart in Richmond (80,034 population) earns $23,481. The mayor of Coquitlam (55,464 population) receives $25,598 while the Kamloops mayor (population 58,311) tops the earnings list with $27,560.

Couvelier said he has also reminded critical taxpayers that the last pay increase was in 1976.

Pssst, Heard About Maggie?

The Princess Marguerite sailed home to Victoria today ending a record-breaking summer season and amid whispers she may go into full-time duty instead of being tied up for the winter.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy says she is considering a year-round service between Victoria and Seattle to keep those U.S. tourists coming. But it is not clear whether she has the Marguerite in mind for this or the Queen of Surrey.

Mrs. McCarthy said she will reveal all in two weeks.

The Marguerite is having problems on the Seattle run because of strict anti-pollution measures in U.S. waters. There are persistent rumors she will be shifted to a new Victoria-Vancouver service and the Queen of Surrey will be activated for the Seattle trip.

'Incredible' Ron

Seconds after Victoria council voted to hold its Nov. 23 meeting in the new James Bay Communtiy Centre, rather than at city hall, Ald. Ron McKenzie asked; "Where's the centre?"

Ald. Murray Glazier, seated nearby, turned to him in a state of feigned shock.

"What? We only spent $40,000 of the taxpayers' money on it and you don't even know where it is?" said Glazier. "Incredible."

McKenzie just smiled and shrugged.

In any case, she is tied up here today and B.C. Steamship manager David Price says minor renovations will begin immediately. She's in good shape, however, and could be ready at a moment's notice if she gets the call.

For the second successive year, he flew last week from Ottawa to walk a part of the historic West Coast Trail.

"There's nothing like walking along this unspoilt coast to get away from it all," he told Frank Camp, superintendent of Pacific Rim National Park.

"There are no homes or development to spoil the atmosphere of the wilderness coast," he said. "I enjoy every moment of it."

Enders walked the beaches and footpaths on the Cape Beale peninsula, near Bamfield, which formerly formed part of the trail complex, but now is considered a separate area.

Last year, he walked the trail from Nitinat Lake to Bamfield.

Cape Beale, like the trail, awaits to be turned over to Parks Canada by the provincial government. The two areas are not yet part of the national park.

It's always nice to receive the formal notice and agenda of Oak Bay council — one day after the meeting.

But the fault is not Oak Bay's. The envelope, postmarked Friday Oct. 6 and correctly addressed, did not arrive until Wednesday Oct. 11.

A Sooke-raised German Shepherd named Watson is helping prevent crime in Seattle, thanks to the John Dykes family.

Dykes, a Sooke resident, was recently honored during a ceremony at the King County Courthouse in Seattle for donating the family pet to the county's department of public safety.

Watson and three other dogs donated for police work have just completed a four-month training course where they were taught tracking skills and the ability to search for narcotics and explosives.

The University of Victoria has established a search committee to begin looking for a new vice-president to replace Dr. George Pederson.

UVic President Dr. Howard Petch is chairman of the search committee.

The candidate chosen by the committee must be presented for a ratification vote by full-time faculty members before being considered by the board of governors, which makes the final decision.

High school jocks get too much of the physical education budget, says Greater Victoria school trustee Dr. Mark Fisher.

Fisher told his colleagues on the board he would like to see a change in provincial government funding policy when it comes to sports.

More emphasis should be placed on the average student with little athletic ability, he said.

TOWN TALK

Too much money is spent on team sports such as football, soccer and basketball and not enough on developing a good health and fitness program for the entire student population.

Fisher also thinks a larger share of physical education funding should go towards developing girls' sports programs.

He says the idea team sports are the only way to promote school spirit is nonsense.

Intellectual pursuits such as chess or the debating club will do the same thing, Fisher maintains.

. . . But maybe Fisher ought to make inquiries about just what's going on in sports at some schools.

At Harborview this year, the emphasis is on participation rather than competition.

The school has abandoned, for example, boys' soccer against other schools and is instead running its own in-house program.

As of now, there are no less than four soccer teams playing each other and while none of the teams could be considered a representative team capable of playing another school, ALL of the boys involved get to play and they enjoy what they're doing.

'He Said He Was Going to Shoot Gizelle'

A deaf mute gave testimony in sign language Thursday in B.C. Supreme Court that John George Auxi, 40, was drinking heavily the night before the bodies of a man and woman were discovered at a Fort Street house last December.

On the third day of a jury trial before Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon, the Crown called Margaret Nyerges, 61, of South Turner Street, a friend and neighbor of the accused, who said she was with Auxi the early morning of Dec. 11, the day when Gizelle Schild, 41, and Sandor Kormos, 43, were found shot about 8 a.m. in Kormos' roominghouse.

Auxi has pleaded not guilty to two counts of first degree murder.

Nyerges gave evidence through sign language communicator Annie M.F. Odynski, who said that although the woman's native language was Hungarian, she had been in Canada since 1959 and was able to understand American sign language.

Nyerges said she had met Gizelle Schild when she arrived in Canada and had been a neighbor of Schild's husband Bela and his mother in Hungary.

When Bela Schild died of a heart attack about Dec. 1, his mother Mrs. Mochar came to Victoria for the funeral and Nyerges said she met Mochar Dec. 10 when Auxi brought her to Nyerges' home. She also said she knew Auxi, with whom she communicated by sign language and in Hungarian, from time to time.

Auxi took the two women the same afternoon to the funeral parlor where Bela Schild's body was lying, then drove up to 1242 Fort where Gizelle Schild and Kormos were living in a second floor front room. Auxi honked his car horn and Kormos came down and spoke to Auxi for a moment.

After he went back in the house, Gizelle Schild came down and spoke to Auxi through the car's open window, and then Auxi introduced her to her late husband's mother.

At that point Gizelle and Auxi "had a little fight or something," Nyerges said. Auxi shouted at the woman and tried to unfasten his seat belt to get out of the car, but Mochar restrained him.

Nyerges said Auxi looked angry, his face white and yellow.

They then drove away and went to Auxi's home on St. Andrews where they ate a meal with Auxi's wife and Nyerges' husband, the witness said. After dinner Mochar put out two bottles of Hungarian whisky she had brought from home, and Auxi and her husband finished one and half of the other before leaving about midnight.

Nyerges said her husband was drunk and went ahead of her and Auxi for the short walk to her house. Auxi was offered beer and sat with the Nyerges in their kitchen, finishing seven bottles to her husband's one, the witness said.

Her husband fell asleep on the table, but Auxi remained to talk with her and eat some fried chicken, leaving the house at about 1:30 a.m.

"Did Auxi say anything strange to you before he went home?" asked Crown counsel Nicholas Lang.

"He said he was going to shoot Gize because he was mad with her," Nyerges said through the interpreter.

Lang asked her if she could relate carefully, going word by word if necessary, what Auxi had said. She repeated that Auxi was mad with Gize.

"'In a little while I will shoot her, I will shoot her, I will shoot her,'" Nyerges said Auxi told her.

At the same time, Nyerges demonstrated Auxi's gesture, a motion with his right hand with a finger extended as if pointing a pistol.

Auxi appeared very white and very angry, she said, and told her, "Don't tell your husband what I said."

"He walked straight enough."

On Dec. 11, the next day, Nyerges said she went back to Auxi's house where she saw Bela Schild's mother and his two children. Auxi and his wife, who had been shopping, appeared in succession shortly afterward.

Auxi was described as "very white-faced. I think his stomach was upset."

In cross-examination, Nyerges told defence counsel Keith Libby that Auxi knew many of the signs used by deaf mutes to communicate, but she could also read his lips when he spoke in Hungarian.

When he said, 'I will shoot her, I will shoot her . . .', he made signs, thrusting his hand with the pointed finger several times, Nyerges said.

Libby produced a transcript of questions to Nyerges and her answers given at a preliminary hearing in the spring. One response concerning that same conversation was, "just having fun, just having fun . . .", Libby said, asking if that was true.

The witness said it was true.

Libby asked if it was true she had said at the preliminary, "He was mad when he went home. He said he would kill Kormos." Nyerges disagreed. Libby put a further question from the preliminary: "Did he make any motion with his hand when he said, 'I'll kill Kormos'? "

And her response then: "He just left and I closed the door."

Nyerges agreed she had said that, then added that Auxi had told her not to tell her husband.

Libby asked why she had not told the preliminary hearing that Auxi said, "I'll kill her, I'll kill her"?

"I don't know," the witness replied.

The jury was excused at this point to allow the court to consider admissibility of further evidence in a trial-within-a-trial which was expected to continue today. Jurors were told they would likely be recalled Tuesday for the balance of the Crown's case.

Before the Judge

A 24-year-old woman was handed concurrent, 30-day jail sentences Thursday in provincial court after pleading guilty to breach of probation and shoplifting.

Defence lawyer Andrew Stewart entered the changes of plea on behalf of Delores Isobel Granfield, 1029 Esquimalt, before Judge Harold Alder.

Granfield was charged with failing to complete 200 hours of community service work assigned her Feb. 11, 1977, for 31 counts of fraud. Crown counsel Richard Law said Granfield performed some of the work but didn't finish it.

She was given the second, 30-day term for theft of a pair of pants from Eaton's on July 18.

Judge William Ostler declined to order compensation to a towing firm, suggesting the subject was for negotiation between the parties or Small Debts Court.

Terry Lee Cronk, 20, of 4864 Townsend, changed his plea to guilty on a charge of mischief causing wilful damage.

Law told the court Cronk's truck was towed away by Gordon's Towing in February and Cronk, with two companions, went to the firm's compound at 1618 Store to retrieve the vehicle.

Law said Cronk was getting his vehicle out without paying the necessary tow charges when one of the firm's employees closed the gate to prevent Cronk from leaving. However, Law said, Cronk backed into the gate, jumped out of his truck and broke a rear-view mirror on a tow truck attempting to block the way.

Gordon's listed damages to the fence and truck totalling $213 and made claim for restitution.

Ostler fined Cronk $75 but refused to order restitution on the grounds it was a summary conviction and he had no authority to make such an order.

William George Boyd, 20, of 2263 Moyes, was fined $200 after pleading guilty to dangerous driving.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Boyd was spotted May 29 by Saanich police at about 9:30 p.m. in the Town and Country shopping centre parking lot, squealing his tires and fishtailing.

Mulligan said Boyd sped off with a police vehicle in pursuit, making an illegal left turn at Douglas and Cadillac and reaching speeds of between 80 and 100 km/h before he reached 189 Cadillac and left the vehicle. He was not apprehended until after he called police the next day, Mulligan stated.

Defence lawyer David McGinnis said his client was remorseful and ashamed about the incident and was not aware the police were chasing him.

A 19-year-old received a 30-day jail sentence, to be served on weekends, after pleading guilty to his second drinking-driving charge in less than 14 months.

Stephen Roy Justice, 7365 Seabrook, received a concurrent, seven-day term for driving while suspended.

Mulligan said Justice was spotted speeding on Beacon Avenue in Sidney at about 1 a.m., Sept. 13, and was pursued for a short distance by Sidney RCMP. Subsequent breath test readings of .17 and .16 were obtained, Mulligan said.

The following day, Mulligan continued, Justice went to the Sidney RCMP detachment to inquire about his driver's licence and was seen driving away. Mulligan said Justice had been suspended by police the night before and by the motor-vehicle branch previously for an unsatisfactory driving record.

Justice was convicted on his first charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on Aug. 22, 1977, and was fined $400.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: William John Rayner, 50, of 844 Falaise Crescent, $400; William Fredrick Porter, 62, of 3800 Palo Alto, $400; Norman Joseph Yakimchuk, 23, of 2111 Spring, $350; Johann Mayer, 39, of 1852 Feltham, $350; John Robert Calow, 53, of 1243 Colville, $50; and Fred Thomas Fellows, 45, formerly of Tahsis, $50.

In addition, Calow and Fellows were placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 60 and 75 hours of community service work, respectively.

Slipping Yanks Call On Guidry

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees, down 2-0 and in desperate need of a victory tonight in the third game of the World Series, give the ball to ace Ron Guidry, who won nearly 90 per cent of his decisions this season.

Los Angeles Dodgers, winners of both games at Dodger Stadium, respond with their proven post-season pitcher, Don Sutton, 15-11 in the regular season.

The Yankees have been about to go down for the third time on several occasions during their uphill season, and each time the skinny Guidry's powerful left arm tossed them a life preserver.

Fifteen times Guidry has stopped Yankees' losing streaks, and he has been the winning pitcher in New York's one-game playoff victory over Boston Red Sox and its American League pennant-clinching triumph over Kansas City Royals.

Does he like being the net underneath the Yanks tightrope act?

"I've learned to live with it," said Guidry, still modest despite the flashiest pitching statistics in recent baseball history.

The lean left-hander from Louisiana finished his remarkable season with a 25-3 record and a 1.73 earned-run average, drawing admiration from another respected member of the pitching profession.

"Watching him pitch a couple of times this year I thought he was Sandy Koufax reincarnated," said Sutton. "Accidentally you should lose at least five games. Having seen him, I'm not surprised he is 25-3, just that anybody could be 25-3."

Guidry seems almost embarrassed by the superlatives and comparisons his gaudy record prompts.

"I don't feel like I'm the best pitcher," said the 28-year-old phenom. "When I sit alongside Jim (Hunter), I feel meek. Here's a guy who's won 20 games for so many years.

"All I've done was win 40 games in two years. Guys like (Tom) Seaver, (Jim) Palmer and Cat have 200 wins in eight or nine years. All I can say right now is that I was one of the best pitchers, that I had one helluva year."

Guidry admits to tiring late in the season, but he was able to make the adjustment from an overpowering thrower to a pitcher who could win when he wasn't at his best. He gives catcher Thurman Munson credit for coaxing late-season wins out of a sleepy arm.

"He knows if I have good stuff, he doesn't worry about location," said Guidry. "When I have that extra foot on my fastball, he just puts down the glove.

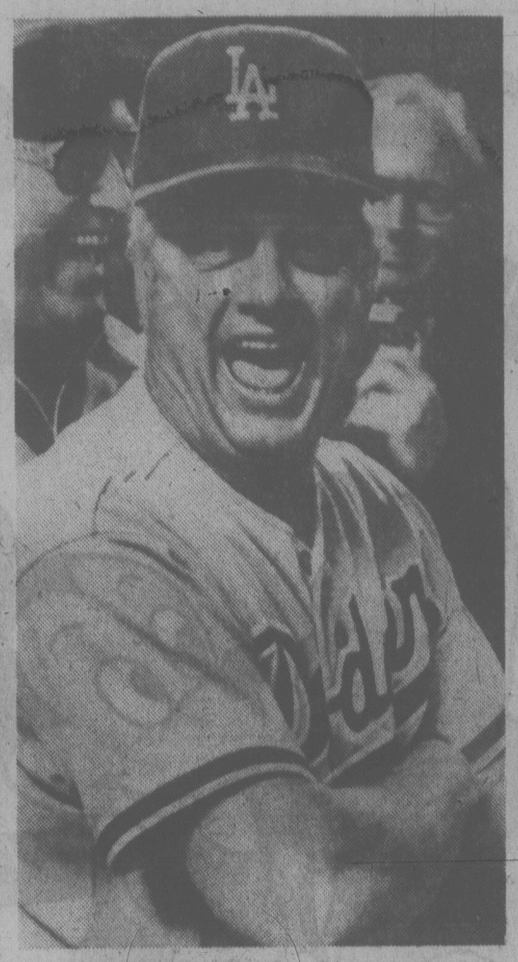
"But when I don't have my best stuff, he moves the glove around a lot more."

Dodgers power was the difference in the first two games, with Davey Lopes providing a pair of homers in the first-game victory and Ron Cey smacking a three-run blast in the second game.

Five of the Dodgers regulars have three hits or more.

Meanwhile, Reggie Jackson has hit the only Yankees homer and has been carrying the offensive load, knocking in half of New York's runs. The other major threats—Munson, Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss—each have one hit.

Yankee manager Bob Lemon says he hopes to have Chambliss and centre fielder Mickey Rivers, both sidelined with injuries in Game 2, back in action tonight.



IN JOVIAL MOOD, Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda jokes and answers questions from reporters during workout session Thursday at New York's Yankee Stadium. Dodgers, who lead best-of-seven baseball World Series 2-0, face Yankees again tonight, starting at 5:30.

Prairie Tigers Are Capable

MEDICINE HAT — Medicine Hat Tigers were supposed to be the weak sisters in the Western Hockey League's Central Division this season, but the Hatters proved stronger than the pundits expected Thursday night while handing Victoria Cougars a 4-2 loss before 2,100 fans.

Mike Winther set the pace for Tigers by scoring twice in the brawl-marred game.

Cougars took 13 of 20 minor penalties, six of 12 majors, three game misconducts and a 10-minute misconduct. The Tigers had two misconducts.

Gary Lupul, Bob Jansch and Scott Lang were sent to the Cougar dressing room following fisticuffs in the first and third periods.

Lupul opened scoring with his fifth goal of the season 16 seconds into the first period but Winther scored before the period ended to tie things up. Curt Broadhead scored an unassisted goal at 2:16 of the second to put Tigers ahead again but Geordie Robertson squared things up for Victoria at 10:09.

Darren Halasz provided Tigers with the winning goal in the last minute of play in the same frame and Winther collected the insurance tally in the third period.

The teams were tied 1-1 after the first period and Medicine Hat, which enjoyed a 37-21 advantage in shots on goal, led 3-2 after the second.

Cougars, who missed the services of Rod Clavette, get some time off before facing the Wheat Kings in Brandon on Sunday. Clavette, who might be able to return to action in Brandon, pulled some shoulder ligaments during the game Tuesday in Calgary.

The loss was the third in four road games for Cougars.

In other league action, Laurie Boschmann scored four goals and set up three others to lead Brandon Wheat Kings to a 12-2 victory over visiting Seattle Breakers, Billings Bighorns trounced Calgary Wranglers 12-3 in Billings and Edmonton Oil Kings and Lethbridge Broncos played to a 3-3 tie in Edmonton.

In Brandon, Boschmann's effort was aided by single markers from the Wheat Kings Brad McCrimmon, Wes Coulson, Mide Perovich, Brian Propp, Ray Allison, Brant Kiessig, Don Gillen and Tim Lockridge.

Brian Graves and Joe Ward replied with power-play goals for the Breakers, who are in the bottom of the Western Division.

The Wheat Kings, who retain their first-place position in the Eastern Division, held period leads of 1-0 and 6-1.

Other Bighorns goal scorers were Cal Roadhouse and Jeff Zilkie with two each. Harvie Potza, Mike Kouwenhoven, Gary Plamondon and Gord Stafford added singles.

Billings scored 10 unanswered goals before the Wranglers appeared on the scoreboard with a two-goal effort by Rick Greenwood and a single from Blake Sullivan.

Calgary is in last place in the Central Division.

In Edmonton, the Oil Kings drew their fourth consecutive tie of the season on home ice with Craig Levie, Steve Blue and Ray Neufeld slipping single markers into the Lethbridge net.

Lindy Ruff, Earl Ingarfield and Larry Jones scored for Lethbridge, who led 2-0 in the first period. The teams were tied 2-2 at the end of the second.

Lethbridge is in first place in the Central Division while Edmonton stays in third place in the Eastern Division.

Flyers Still Like Shero

By The Canadian Press

Resentment still simmers in some areas of Philadelphia, including certain stalls in the Flyers National Hockey League dressing room. Words like "fraud" still are used when people speak of Fred Shero's resignation as coach of the Flyers and reappearance weeks later as general manager-coach of New York Rangers.

But some, like Philadelphia defenceman Andre Dupont, say: "Maybe he pulled something a little fast when he left Philadelphia, but I still love the man. He's like my father. Everything I know about hockey I learned from him. He'll never be an enemy."

"He was a good friend—still is," said goaltender Bernie Parent. "I respect him as a man, as a coach, and for what he did for the team."

In the Flyers minds, there was little thought of revenge. Thursday night's 3-3 National Hockey League tie with the Rangers was just another game.

In other NHL games, New York Islanders and Buffalo Sabres skated to a 2-2 draw and Boston Bruins whipped Pittsburgh Penguins 8-2.

"We were playing the Rangers, not Freddie," said centre Bobby Clarke, leader of the squad which won two Stanley Cup championships under Shero's guidance. "It's a game—a living," added Parent. "You can't have any feelings when you go on the ice."

Shero said: "Once the game started, I didn't worry about it being the Flyers. I just worried about my own team."

That team now is the Rangers. "But it doesn't mean I'm calm because I look calm. I was nervous before the game," Shero admitted.

With Shero and Swedish imports Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg making their regular-season debuts for New York, the Rangers charged to a 3-0 first-period lead.

"We decided to go out and make the plays, get the goals and make things happen," said Rangers goalie John Davidson. "We seem to have a little more confidence for some strange reason."

That may be because of Shero, who directed the Flyers to 308 victories, 95 ties and just 151 losses in the 554 games of his seven-year career with Philadelphia. It may be because of Hedberg and Nilsson, the awesome offensive threats lured to the NHL from the Winnipeg Jets of World Hockey Association.

At 9:36, the Rangers were given the first of three two-man advantages when defencemen Dupont and Bob Dailey were sent off.

Hedberg set up the first goal, a tip-in by Steve Vickers at 11:00, and Nilsson set up the second—a deflection by linemate Pat Hickey—just 23 seconds later.

Mike McEwen added a third power play goal—the Rangers had 11 power plays to just four for the Flyers—to make it 3-0 at 17:34 before second-period goals by Clarke, Bill Barber and Paul Holmgren brought Philadelphia even.

The rally extended to 13 games the Flyers unbeaten streak against New York, which includes six victories and seven ties since April 4, 1976. But it was the first, of course, under coach Bob McCammon, who replaced Shero after his departure from New York.

Italy Derails Canada's Bid For Medal

MANILA (CP) — Italy beat Canada 100-83 in the world basketball championship semi-final round today, dumping the Canadians out of contention for a medal.

The loss was Canada's fifth against only two wins in the semi-final round and sent it into a playoff for fifth place against the United States.

Yugoslavia and the defending champion Soviet Union meet for the gold medal.

Leo Rautins of Toronto was the high scorer for Canada with 28 points against Italy. Rautins missed much of the second half after twisting his ankle in a scramble under the Italian basket.

Dino Meneghin led the Italians with 23 points and Pier Luigi Marzorati had 20.

"It comes down to maturity," Canadian coach Jack Donohue said of the loss. "We don't seem to understand when we have control of the game.

"There were times when we had control and let it slip away. The Italians are a very good team and if they get control of the game they really know how to handle the game.

"I know our guys worked hard and wanted to win but we haven't played with the intensity that is needed to win. They will acquire that through experience."

In a game Thursday, Canada beat the Phillippines, 99-88.

Canada led by as much as 17 points early in the game with Donohue resting most of his key players.

Reserve guard Howard Kelsey of Vancouver scored 22 points, mostly on jump shots, and Leo Rautins of Toronto had 20 points.

Donohue said the result was never in doubt. "The object was to win the game and it was obvious that we would from pretty early on. It is very hard for players to get excited when they know they are going to win."

The host Phillipines has not won a game in the 14-team tournament.

In another semi-final Thursday, the defending champion Soviet Union beat the U.S., 97-76.

In other games, Czechoslovakia beat Senegal 112-82 to clinch ninth place, and Puerto Rico beat the Domincan Republic, 119-80.

Yugoslavia, runner-up to the Soviet Union in the last world championship, takes an edge into the final because it beat the champions 105-92 in their semi-final match four days ago.

The Soviet Union wound up its semi-final schedule today with a 94-85 win over Brazil while the United States beat the winless host Philippines, 100-70.

Oak Bay Trios evened their record at 2-2 Thursday night by tripping Juan de Fuca Gulls 5-2 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Randy Williams and Dave McLauchlan replied for Gulls, who now have a 1-3 record.

Trios took a 3-2 lead going into the final 20 minutes after the teams played to a 1-1 deadlock in the first period.

Scottish Draw

LONDON (CP) — The draw for the Scottish League Cup quarter-final round made Thursday:
Rangers vs. Arbroath; Montrose vs. Celtic; Ayr United vs. Aberdeen, and Morton vs. Hibernian.
First leg matches to be played Wednesday, Nov. 8, with the return legs Wednesday, Nov. 15.

Walton Still Out

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton still has his foot in a cast since injuring it last February 28 and won't be able to play basketball until at least next February, his lawyer said Thursday.

Charles Garry said the disgruntled National Basketball Association star has been under the care of Dr. Robert Kerland, the team physician of Los Angeles Lakers and a specialist in sports medicine.

"His leg is still in a cast and will be for another month," Garry said in a telephone interview.

ROCKIES PICK UP WILKINS

DENVER (AP) — Colorado Rockies signed free agent Barry Wilkins, a one-time Vancouver Canuck, in an effort to add depth to their defence, the National Hockey League club has announced.

The 31-year-old defenceman will report to the Rockies' farm club, Philadelphia Firebirds of the American League, where he will work himself into playing condition. The 6-foot, 190-pound Wilkins is an 11-year veteran of both the NHL and the World Hockey Association. Last year he played for the WHA Indianapolis Racers.

Meanwhile, the NHL's Detroit Red Wings trimmed their roster to 25 by assigning defenceman John Hillworth and No. 6 draft choice Sylvain Locas to Kansas City of the Central League.

Sideline Move Prompts Fine

TORONTO (CP) — Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the Canadian Football League, has fined Toronto Argonauts linebacker Harold Randolph for a vicious off-field tackle of a Calgary player in last weekend's game and called for a revision of CFL rules to deal specifically with future incidents of a similar nature.

Randolph was standing off the playing field in the area of the Toronto bench when he reached out and grabbed Stampeders' Ray Odums, who was running along the sidelines and had just stepped out of bounds after intercepting a pass in the first quarter of the game at Calgary.

Gaudaur said the game official, guided by league rules, would have awarded an automatic touchdown and disqualified the offending player had the incident occurred on the playing field.

However, since the offence had occurred off the field, an unnecessary roughing penalty of 15 yards was applied. It was offset by another roughing penalty against Calgary when a Stampeder retaliated.

Calgary won the game 22-1, handing the Argos their eighth straight loss.

Gaudaur, in fining Randolph $100 for the incident, warned that a similar occurence would result in a heavier fine and disqualification.

Grid Semis Set Sunday

Hollywood Park faces Kings Hotel at 12 noon and Comcor tackles Reliable Transfer at 2 p.m. in Vancouver Island Touch Football League semi-final games Sunday at Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

Hollywood Park took the league title with a 4-0 record. Comcor finished at 3-1, Reliable Transfer was 2-2, Kings Hotel 1-3 and Swan Lake 0-4.

Rose's Days In Cincinnati Are Numbered

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, rejecting what Cincinnati Reds called their final offer, said Thursday that barring "a miracle" he would not be with the National League baseball team in 1979.

"If the people who run this ball club have had enough of me, the grass is greener in other pastures and the only thing I can do is go to those other pastures," Rose said at a news conference in his lawyer's office.

The 38-year-old Reds' hitting star said he sees no way to avoid entering baseball's free agent draft and becoming a free agent.

"Unless a miracle occurs, it looks like I'm going to go through the draft," said Rose, whose two-year contract expired at the end of the regular season.

Rose said the Reds' final offer "surprised me to the point where I felt they were saying 'we just don't want you.'"

Reds' president Dick Wagner had offered what he called the largest salary in Reds' history. Rose said it was not. Rose made a counter-offer early this week and Wagner responded with a counter-offer Wednesday, saying it was as high as the club could go.

Under questioning, Rose said the package did not include any additional money for attendance clauses or incentive bonuses.

SIMPSON SENT DOWN

Pierre Won't Leave Habs

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Alan Eagleson says defenceman Pierre Bouchard will play for Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League or retire.

"He's not leaving Montreal and if he can't play hockey in Montreal, I am certain that Pierre will retire," Eagleson said on Thursday.

"Now if he retires, he is going to be forced into retirement by what I consider a silly position of clubs within the National Hockey League. It is another example where the owners don't really care about player rights."

Apart from being the lawyer for Bouchard and scores of other professional athletes, Eagleson serves as executive director of the NHL Players' Association.

Bouchard, one of the most popular players on the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens, was left unprotected by Montreal in the intra-league draft Oct. 9, and was claimed by Washington Capitals. The Capitals traded Bouchard back to Montreal for forward Rodney Schutt within 24 hours.

On Wednesday, however, NHL president John Ziegler declared the trade of Bouchard null and void because it contravened a league bylaw.

Ziegler said the bylaw stated that a player claimed in an intra-league draft could not be transferred, unless he first cleared waivers.

"I know one thing," Eagleson said. "We have a valid lawsuit against Washington, Montreal and the National Hockey League. I don't think Pierre is interested in suing anybody, nor am I.

One More Step Left

LOS ANGELES (AP) — City council, the last group whose favorable ruling was needed to bring the 1984 Summer Olympics to Los Angeles, voted Thursday to approve an agreement between the city and the International Olympic Committee.

The council voted 10-to-2 to adopt a resolution from a private committee recommending that the city agree to act as host for the Games.

Despite a 1½-hour debate that preceded the vote, and the months of negotiation that resulted in a historic contract that allows the city to transfer financial responsibility for the Games to a private group, one more step remains before international Olympic officials are invited to Los Angeles for a signing ceremony.

In 10 days the matter returns to the council agenda for a second reading, when the resolution is expected to pass automatically.

The council voted unanimously to ask the International Olympic Committee officials to come to Los Angeles for the signature ceremony, rather than send city officials to Lausanne, Switzerland, as is traditional. The committee will pay the IOC's travel expenses.

If the committee does not sign its own agreement with the IOC and the United States Olympic Committee within 30 days, the city's agreement with the IOC becomes void.

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Sport fishing success around the southern end of Vancouver Island appears to range from fair to hot and up-Island fishermen are enjoying a bountiful harvest of large coho in a number of spots.

Finlayson Arm waters perked up again Wednesday after two slow days. Most of the catch has been winter chinooks to nine pounds taken on Buzz Bombs near the White Lady and Stone House. Some nice coho to 12 pounds are also showing in the same spots.

Indian Bay waters are yielding jacks to four pounds and the odd coho to seven on hootchies.

Bruce Obee picked up a 16-pound coho Saturday using a blue Squirt in the vicinity of Whiskey Point and drift-fishermen are hauling in similar — but smaller — catches off Wain Rock.

Success off Sidney has improved a "wee bit" with winter chinooks to eight pounds grabbing Squirts and strip trolled close to the bottom off Coal and Forrest islands.

Winter chinooks ranging from six to 14 pounds are showing off the rocks and breakwater at Oak Bay. Drift-fishing lures have worked best.

Winter chinooks to 10 pounds, along with a few coho to 16, are showing between Christopher Point and Church Point. Trollers using hootchie-type gear have experienced the most success and drift-fishing luck appears to be tapering off.

From Church to Bedford, the catch consists mainly of winter chinooks to four pounds with a few coho to 16 thrown in for added interest. Here, too, hootchies are working best.

Action off Sooke has slowed down with only a few coho and winter chinooks, both near the 14-pound mark, coming in from Secretary Island. Just about every type of terminal gear is working when fished at the 70-foot depth.

Buzz-Bombers are landing some excellent catches of coho and winter chinooks off Coffin Island but the hottest fishing is still off Nanaimo.

Norm Coughtry took his limit of four between five and 10 pounds in one hour Tuesday evening while trolling with minnows and yellow and white Flashtails between Snake and Entrance islands. Other top-notch spots have been off the northern tip of Big Finger Island and near Hudson Rock.

The "bite" appears to be extremely short — the last hour before dark at night.

On the other side of the Island, winter chinooks to 10 pounds are providing action in Vernon Bay on the northern side of Barkley Sound. Strip, fished at the 60-foot depth, is bringing in the top catches.

Other good coho spots have been the south end of Hornby Island, Butler Point, Indian Village, Quathiaski Cove, Copper Bluff and April Point. Fishermen are connecting with small herring mooched close to the bottom and with sparsely-tied (or plucked) bucktails trolled on the surface.

Trout anglers are picking up fair catches in most Island lakes.

NIBBLES: Mert Conrad collected the prize for September in the monthly Sidney Anglers' Association derby with a 17:08-pounder . . . His son, Tim, won junior honors with a 8:04-pounder.

Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association will hold their monthly Frostbite Derby from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

"I'm putting you on probation. That means no more mugging for 12 months."

Islanders Rough On Cariboo Hill

Cariboo Hill of Burnaby dropped its second straight match on a high school rugby tour of Vancouver Island on Thursday, bowing 23-4 to Shawnigan Lake Boys' School at Shawnigan Lake.

On Wednesday, St. Michael's University School tripped visiting Cariboo Hill, 30-6.

Brad Ostrom set the pace for Shawnigan with two tries, while single four-pointers were added by Alisdair Cunningham and Lionel Wild. Chris Crossfield kicked a penalty goal and two conversions for the balance of points.

Amir Mamdari scored two tries to lead St. Michael's while Wim Vanderspek, Don Finnerty and Darcy Bacon each scored a single try and Ross McLean kicked two penalty goals and two conversions.

Lanny McDonald tells you how to make skates your bag.

Here's Lanny's special offer. If you buy a pair of Bauer's Supreme II 97's, 96's or 92's with the black plastic blade by Dec. 31, you can get that terrific Bauer travel bag like the one Lanny uses absolutely free. It's a $25.00 value.

That's right, simply buy the Bauer Supreme II's at a participating dealer and you'll get a coupon to send for your brand new bag. The bag is perfect for those short "road trips" or the overnights. Or you could use it for your skates, gloves and other smaller equipment items. Or you could use it for the gym, for toiletries, in fact, for almost anything you'd like.

The soft leather-like polyurethane bag has two large zippered compartments with vinyl lined pockets and an adjustable shoulder strap.

You know how to use the skates. The Bauer Supreme II's are Lanny's skates and if you've seen him play (47 goals for the Toronto Maple Leafs last year means you're not loafing) you'll know how he relies on speed and agility.

Lanny McDonald has used Bauer throughout his career. It's something any young player can do because Bauer has a skate for most ages. Illustrated are the Junior Supreme (with black blade); the Big Chief, the outstanding buy in a steel blade boy's skate and the Supreme II 97's. There are many more where they come from and you can see most of them at your local Bauer dealer.

See him before Dec. 31 and get your Bauer Supreme II 97's, 96's or 92's and make your skating a whole new bag in more ways than one.

Panty Hose Do the Trick

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Browns running back Greg Pruitt dons a pair of panty hose to support his injured leg during practice and says he can now understand women taking more time to dress than men.

The elastic stockings were designed by Leo Murphy, trainer of the National Football League team, and cover Pruitt's injured leg completely. They are cut off at the girdle section on the other leg.

Browns officials say the stockings equallize pressure on the badly bruised leg. There had been speculation that Pruitt would be able to play in Sunday's game against Pittsburgh Steelers, but that now is in doubt.

"If the game was today, I couldn't play," said Pruitt, who is also troubled by a lower back problem which he said developed while he was jogging.

"I guess I was favoring the bum leg and threw out something else."

Pruitt has missed the last four games, but remains the team's leading ground gainer, 226 yards on 44 carries. The last month has been a discouraging one for him.

"I've had to fight to keep from getting down," he said. "Like last night, I watched Delvin Williams running for Miami (Dolphins)... Seeing him out there piling up the yards, and with me on the bench, sort of depressed me. I can hardly wait to get back, but there's no sense in doing it too early."

Browns coach Sam Rutigliano said Pruitt has been listed as "questionable" on the official report for Sunday's game.

"We should know more about Greg by Thursday or Friday," Rutigliano said. "He hasn't been hit for a month and it will take time to get back into the swing of things."

Calvin Hill and Cleo Miller are set to open at the running back spots Sunday. Both played last Sunday in the victory over New Orleans Saints.

ARGO CASUALTIES

TORONTO (CP) — Linebacker Rick Sowieta has joined quarterback Chuck Ealey and defensive end Wayne Smith as casualties of Toronto Argonauts' last Canadian Football League game in Calgary. Sowieta suffered a twisted knee and will be lost for the season.

$100,000-a-Year Administrator Hired For Lake Placid

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee, plagued by signs of internal problems, has hired a new $100,000-a-year administrator to "pull everything together."

The organizers have retained Peter L. Spurney, 43, of Washington, D.C., who managed the 1974 World's Fair in Spokane and the American Freedom Train in 1975-76.

Recently, he has been helping plan the Discovery Train in Canada, a travelling exhibit designed to promote national unity.

HANCOCK LEADING UNDER-25 PRO FIELD

NIMES, France (AP) — Phil Hancock of the United States took a two-stroke lead after the first round Thursday of the world golf championship for under-25 professionals.

Hancock fired a 66, six under par on the tough 6,720-yard Nimes course. Peter Barber of Britain had a 68. Sharing third place, with 71s, were Juan Anglada of Spain, Pat MacGowan of the U.S. and Gary Harvey of Britain.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby fired a 72 and shared sixth place over all with Noel Blenkarne of Britain.

Canada Runnerup In World Cup Test

PACIFIC HARBOUR, Fiji (Reuter) — Cathy Sherk of Fonthill, Ont., claimed the individual title in the women's world amateur golf championship today but her 294 total wasn't enough to lift Canada to the team trophy.

Australia won the Espirito Santo Trophy when Jane Lock produced a brilliant chip shot on the final hole.

To ensure Australia its first victory in the world amateur team championship, Lock had to get down in two from the rough beneath a small tree about 60 yards from the green. She lofted a shot which landed on the front of the green and rolled to within three feet of the hole.

Lock played a magnificent last four holes to come from behind and deny the Canadians, who were led by Sherk's par 72.

Australia finished with 596 and Canada 597. France was third at 602 and Britain-Ireland and the United States were tied at 605. The best two scores of the three-woman teams counted in each day's team total.

Canada, with the United States and Britain-Ireland, had been six shots behind Australia at the start of the fourth and final round.

Under the competition rules, Canada and Australia would have been joint champions if there had been a tie. There would have been no play-off.

Canada made a great effort to pull the championship back from the Australians. Sherk's round was the only par round of the day in difficult, blustery conditions.

The Americans, who looked capable of making a strong challenge, faltered and the best two rounds they could produce were 78's.

Sherk had rounds of 72, 74, 76 and 72 for her 294 total that gave her a four-stroke edge in the individual standings. Next at 298 were Lock, M. Oda of Japan and Beth Daniel of the U.S.

Ten Straight Sub-Par Holes

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Tom Watson has the determined look of a man who's going to be the first to bank $400,000 in a single year just for knocking a little ball into a hole.

Thursday he battered Dale Hayes of South Africa to an 11 and 9 defeat in the first round of the World Match Play tournament on the Wentworth Club's 6,969-yard, par-73 course. It was the heaviest defeat handed out in the 15-year history of the tournament, it included 11 birdies and an eagle. Midway through the 36-hole match, Watson had shot 10 consecutive holes in nine-under par.

Watson said afterwards that those 10 holes—from the 15th in the morning round until the sixth in the afternoon—"were the best I've ever played."

If he wins the four-day tournament, Watson will collect another $60,000.

In today's second round, Australian Graham Marsh, the title-holder, was to play Britain's Nick Faldo, Spaniard Severiano Ballesters was to play New Zealander Simon Owen, Japan's Isao Aoki was to meet South African Gary Player. Watson was to go against American Ray Floyd.

Apart from Watson's brilliance, the day was a poor one for the Americans, with Watson and Floyd the only two from the United States to advance. Floyd beat PGA champion John Mahaffey 5-and-4, but U.S. Open champion Andy North, Andy Bean and Lee Elder all lost.

North went down 5-and-4 to Owen, the New Zealander who came a close second to Jack Nicklaus in the British Open last summer. Faldo, the 22-year-old British hope, beat Bean 5-and-4, while Isao Aoki of Japan beat Elder 5-and-3.

Gary Player, the Masters winner, who has won here five times—far more than anyone else—made a storming come-back after being four down against David Graham of Australia.

Player gradually chipped away at Graham's lead, squared the match at the 31st, then picked up two of the final four holes to win 2-and-1.

ORDERED BY ADULTS, EXECUTED BY CHILDREN

Special Body Needed To Curb Violence

MONTREAL (CP) — The author of a report on curbing violence in junior hockey says he hopes its recommendations will be followed in other provinces after encouraging success in Quebec.

Gilles Neron, a professor of physical education at University of Montreal, says that 80 per cent of the recommendations in his three-year study have been implemented in Quebec and he hopes it can be put to further use.

"I talked to the federal sport minister, Iona Campagnolo, three weeks ago, and she said she intends to encourage the different federations to use it," he said.

Neron, who has a doctorate from Florida State University, was speaking in an interview after a brief address to a symposium on sports medicine sponsored by the university.

"There is violence in hockey—that was our main conclusion. It is planned, it is orchestrated, it is ordered by adults and executed by children in amateur hockey," he said.

"The most important recommendation is that we have a need to educate parents, coaches and referees. We also recommended implementation of a regie des sports, a sports regulatory body, to eliminate violence."

Neron said the Quebec government has established a committee to study what form such a body would take and that he expects legislation to be introduced in the national assembly next year.

There are 200,000 players registered with the Quebec Minor Hockey Association, Neron said, but only 2,000 are at the junior level, whether major junior or A, B or C. Much of the tailing-off can be attributed to violence, he said.

"We had testimony from parents taking their kids out of hockey, or the kids deciding they didn't want to continue, so that they wouldn't have to fight.

"There is a law of silence in junior hockey that keeps the players quiet. If a junior says he won't fight, the coach will bench him when pro scouts come around and tell him that his chances of a professional career are finished.

Neron said that, despite risk of injury, "hockey is the only sport we know that permits fighting."

"The rules say no, but they permit it. They tell you how to fight—no hair-pulling and no bandages on the hands. They tell you not to fight, 'but here's how.' "

"We had players tell us that toward the end of a game where they hadn't scored or got an assist, they'd purposely hook or trip someone to get their names in the paper."

Neron criticized the argument that fighting is therapeutic in that it cuts down on such offences of frustration as slashing and spearing.

25-Year Love Affair With Canada

FLORENCE ELSKAMP
. . . Ottawa's unofficial archivist

elizabeth forbes

Florence Elskamp, who came to Victoria to retire in May this year, is only now applying for citizenship status.

"I've got time to concentrate on it, something I didn't have before," is the way she explains this fact.

Nevertheless, she has had a love affair with Canada for almost a quarter-century.

It was sparked by two people and two events that touched her life within a week of her arrival in Ottawa from London, England, more than 23 years ago.

Almost immediately she was hired as an addressograph machine operator in the city clerk's office, situated at that time with other city hall offices in what is now the National Capital Commission building.

The first morning she joined the long line of people entering that building, someone told her that Charlotte Whitten, Ottawa's mayor, was right behind her.

"As I was fresh from England where strict protocol surrounds a mayor, you can imagine to find I was standing ahead of Miss Whitten was a startling surprise," she said in telling me this story.

A bigger surprise came when she stepped back respectfully to let the mayor enter an elevator and was pushed in ahead by that forthright person.

"As the elevator ascended she spoke my name, welcomed me to Ottawa and wished me every success."

That was the first person and the first happening to influence Miss Elskamp in her love affair with Canada.

"I was a Whitten fan from then on," she confesses, "and my admiration for that outstanding Canadian woman grew with the years."

The second person and second event came when she entered the city clerk's office.

"He gave me the morning off — another surprise; ushered me to a table in a corner and placed several hundred pictures and slides in front of me.

"Then he said one of my first duties was to familiarize myself with the city and its surroundings and the easiest way was through those pictures and slides.

"Also that I had a half day to do it."

At the end of the morning, Florence Elskamp knew there was no turning back.

She was dedicated to working for the city of Ottawa and, through it, for Canada.

In the 23 years after that she worked with three different city clerks and six mayors, starting with Miss Whitten and ending with Mayor Lorry Greenberg.

Gradually she became more and more submerged in city affairs.

She took charge of all documents that came in to the city clerk's office, checked and filed all by-laws that were passed and saw that bound copies of those by-laws went out at the end of each year to a preferred list of people and libraries.

"It was quite an education," she says now. "I had my fingers on everything, elections, leases, the by-laws and minutes of council."

Gradually, too, and side-by-side with her main duties, she began delving into stacks of yellowed manuscripts; poring over musty documents and the minutes of forgotten council meetings and leafing through the 30,000 or more by-laws passed from the first days of Bytown (Ottawa) in 1850.

This brought to light hundreds of historic details from Ottawa's past.

And, as she shared these interesting finds with anyone interested or who asked, she gained the name of the city's unofficial archivist.

"I loved every minute of it," she says. "Sometimes I was really run ragged, but I enjoyed it. There wasn't a day when I didn't learn something."

When the present spacious city hall was opened she moved with the city clerk's department to that building.

By then, a full-time archivist, Edwin Welsh, had been appointed and along with her other work, Miss Elskamp was helping him in setting up temporary archives.

"City clerk's offices were on the bottom floor, the archivist's on the top," she remembers.

"We had moved in before the elevators were working and before hand railings had been placed on the winding stairs.

"You can imagine what an effort it was to communicate."

As this phase of her work increased, she says, she learned "more about Ottawa and its past than some who had been born in the city and lived there all their lives."

Actually, she points out, it wasn't until Canada's centennial year of 1967 that any great interest was shown in past history.

Now, of course, Canadians everywhere — and of every age — are asking questions.

In June, 1977, Ottawa established a separate city archives in an old school building on Stanley Street, not far from City Hall.

And when the "great moving day" came, Florence Elskamp went with the boxes of by-laws and artifacts to continue research full-time with the city archivist.

Her days — and many nights and weekends — from then on were spent answering questions from the public about early life in Ottawa.

In the new archives, she helped organize a section for historic artifacts. And before she retired she saw micrographic, audio-visual and photographic sections and workshops arranged on various floors.

She also arranged a reference department where she had her desk, museum, conservation and administration rooms on the ground floor and good storage space in the basement.

Indeed, she looked forward to several more years in that exciting atmosphere.

Fate was against her, however.

Last winter, on her way to work one morning, she slipped on the ice and broke some ribs.

Return to health was slow with the result that she finally decided to take early retirement and move to Victoria to be near close friends.

The future?

"I don't want to stagnate," is all she says.

At the moment she is concentrating on getting her Canadian citizenship.

"After that, we'll see."

Stay out of mud when you wear your rope-trimmed shoes. You can brush off dry mud, lightly shampoo the trim, but you may never get out a muddy stain. And step over puddles; wet roping or burlap trim loosens the glue that holds it in place. Once loosened, the trim begins to fray . . . and there goes the nifty look of your shoes.

Results Encouraging In Latest MS Findings

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

By L. L. COLEMAN, MD.

Multiple sclerosis is constantly under bombardment with every conceivable form of therapy. The fact that MS resists so many new ideas of treatment does not dissuade doctors and scientists from their constant onslaught against this ravaging disease.

Now, a new form of treatment is being carefully observed for possible remissions of MS, and for its control. Dr. Richard A. Neubauer, director of the Ocean Medical Centre in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has been using hyperbaric oxygen for the treatment of multiple sclerosis. Patients are placed in a hyperbaric chamber and given high concentrations of oxygen.

Dr. Neubauer feels that the initial studies are sufficiently encouraging to warrant further studies. The results in some of his cases showed moderate to marked improvement.

Perhaps these findings can point to another ray of hope for the courageous sufferers of this complex disease.

Joseph A. Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, is actively interested in developing an international health service corps. The corps would be an expansion of the Peace Corps health programs. Its prime purpose would be to improve worldwide health, nutrition and family planning.

It is expected that, at the beginning, about 200 doctors, nurses, paramedics and other health professionals will be recruited for this important national and international program. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is expected to introduce appropriate legislation. The bill, if passed, would allow doctors to pay back government loans for their medical education with such overseas and national service.

It is hoped that the many areas in the United States that have no doctors in residence will be beneficiaries of this program. Under this plan, health activities can be coordinated to help medically impoverished areas.

When the urinary bladder is removed because of cancer many difficult problems of management arise.

A new prosthetic bladder has been devised by research workers at the University of Miami. Dr. Eugene C. Eckstein has been doing experimental studies with Dr. Jacob Kline in the hope of creating a substitute urinary bladder.

Preliminary tests in experimental animals are promising. Even though these studies suggest that they are a few years away from attaining their goal, it is gratifying to know that such dedicated scientists have taken on the burden of exhaustive scientific research.

Some Answers on PCB, DDT Issue

By LYNNE GORDON

Few subjects arouse such strong emotions in people as a nice, friendly discussion about what kinds of food we should or should not eat.

Even nutritionists and other food experts sometimes disagree strongly among themselves on this highly personal topic.

And the talk gets even more heated when you turn, for a moment, from what we as adults should be eating, to the even more sensitive question of what parents should feed their children.

For a start, there's that highly-charged, seemingly endless debate between the advocates of breast-feeding, on the one hand, and those who put their faith in the baby bottle and the infant formula on the other.

Most experts do come out in favor of breast-feeding. They point out, for example, that a mother's own milk contains protective antibodies that give infants who are breast-fed an immunity against infections until they are old enough to develop antibodies of their own. They emphasize, too, the extra emotional and psychological benefit that both mother and child enjoy as a result of breast-feeding.

On the other side of the picture is the fact that bottle-feeding has been highly popular and widely promoted in the last 50 years, and only in recent years has breast-feeding begun to make a strong comeback.

Several months ago, the whole controversy between the two sides flared up all over again with television and newspaper reports that warned of the contamination of breast milk by two highly toxic chemicals, PCB and DDT.

Now, there's an important point to keep in mind on this issue. When these reports first hit the airwaves and newspapers, the media, in all its forms, gave full play to several experts who issued dramatic warnings that nursing mothers had better abandon the breast and switch to formulas to ensure their children's safety.

But if you paid attention to this story in the days and weeks that followed, you also heard that most experts, after they'd had a chance to study the matter, concluded that the advantages of breast-feeding still continued to far outweigh the fear of contaminants.

In my own interviews with a wide range of experts, I found that the original reports of contamination by PCBs and DDT had indeed been blown out of all proportion.

However, it is also true that most experts caution that the safety of mother's milk in our sometimes highly polluted environment depends on the individual situation of each mother.

So if you live, or work, say, in the midst of a lot of industrial pollution, then you, as a nursing mother, have to take special precautions.

Where do you turn if you are confused on this issue?

First, contact your public health unit. Through them, you'll find out how and where to have your milk tested, if that is what appears to be called for. With their help, you will also learn to tailor your diet to keep PCBs and DDT down to a minimum.

For example, did you know that PCBs — namely polychlorinated biphenyls, a by-product of industrial processes — are highly concentrated in fresh-water fish? Or that DDT — an insecticide banned years ago that still contaminates the environment — is most concentrated in high fat foods of animal origin, such as sirloin and rib roasts? These are important facts for everyone, not just pregnant and nursing mothers.

Another hint, for nursing mothers, is to avoid excessive weight loss — that is, losing more than you normally would after pregnancy. PCBs and DDT collect in fat tissue and can end up in increased amounts in breast-milk if you lose weight too quickly.

In speaking with several experts, I also discovered that cow's milk, as well as breastmilk, has had its own share of controversy over the years.

As an example, reports came out a few years ago about a condition known as "lactose intolerance." Lactose is the name for the naturally occurring sugar found in milk. Typically, people who can't handle lactose are otherwise healthy and drank milk as children without any problems. But as they get older, some people become deficient in the enzyme that is needed to digest the lactose.

Because they can't digest the lactose properly, if a person with this condition drinks a lot of milk, the result may be an uncomfortable case of gas and diarrhea.

At first, lactose intolerance was believed to be widespread around the world. But recent, more accurate methods of testing for it have shown that it's not as common as had been thought even two years ago.

Also, some people who are lactose intolerant can still digest milk in small amounts. And they may do fine with fermented dairy products, such as yogurt and some cheeses, that have low amounts of lactose. There is even a product, Lact-Aid, that will actually pre-digest the lactose in milk for you.

There has also been a lot of debate among experts over milk allergies. The symptoms include vomiting and diarrhea, in this case caused by abnormal antibodies that make some people highly sensitive to dairy products. Again, this is a rare condition. But as with milk intolerance, it is absolutely vital to seek specialized advice at the first symptoms, rather than fiddling around for months on end if you — or your children — are having troubles with digestion.

Most people drink milk, and have no problems. What should people do who can't eat dairy products, or who refuse to eat them for philosophical or religious reasons? For one thing, they have to find substitutes for the calcium that occurs in milk. For example, an alternate source may include kale and some other leafy green vegetables that are relatively high in calcium. You also have to makesure that you have another source for vitamin D and in some cases vitamin B-12 — especially if you are pregnant or nursing a baby.

For more details on this and other topics related to milk, consult the new Canada Food Guide put out by the federal department of Health and Welfare. Along with a lot of other useful information, it's available, at no charge, from your public health unit.

IT'S A HONEY OF A PROBLEM

TULSA (AP) — Lawyer Bert McElroy has a sticky situation that has apparently been building up over a period of years.

His house is leaking honey. Lots of it.

It's been dripping from the living room ceiling of his two-storey home for several weeks. His law partners claim he goes home to lunch every day to change honey jars.

McElroy said the residence has had bee problems for years. A few years ago, he had painters block off all the exterior holes they could find to prevent the bees from infiltrating the house.

"I guess they patched it, because bees started coming out of the (interior) woodwork," McElroy said. But the bees gradually disappeared, until a few weeks ago.

"I walked into the house one day and noticed a sticky puddle on the floor," McElroy said. "It was dripping from the living room ceiling in front of the window. The bees must have had their hive between the ceiling and the floor of the bedroom above it."

McElroy drilled holes and placed pots to catch the sticky drip.

"About a gallon of honey has dripped out in the past few weeks," he said.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I'm 14 and my parents are divorced. My sister and I live with our mom. Recently, my mom has gotten a new boyfriend, whom I loathe. My sister likes him, which is even worse. Mom says she really enjoys his company, so he spends practically every night here.

Whenever I try to talk to my mom about my problems concerning him, she won't, or can't, see my point of view. She figures that because she loves him, so should I. My friends dislike him too, so it's not just me, like mom keeps insisting.

I really hate him, but mom says I should grin and bear it; that it's bound to get better. I'm just afraid it's going to get worse. What can I do?

ANSWER: Children whose parents are divorced have to work with some pretty complicated feelings when their mother or father find someone else that they care about. It is especially difficult for you since you don't like the person that your mother likes.

You may not be able to change your feelings about your mother's boyfriend, but I think you should understand that it may be very important for your mother to have a boyfriend.

First, when two married people become divorced there is a lot of hurt involved. Both people can have feelings, that they will never be loved again, that they aren't worth much, have guilty feelings, and start to feel very sad because they believe that their life is finished.

This boyfriend is not taking your father's place — that is impossible. But this person is important to your mother. I advise you to work hard not to let your feelings show too much at this time. If this man can make your mother happy then in some way he is making you all happy.

You are important and your feelings count, but right now your mother's sadness may be greater than yours and you can help her by trying to accept her boyfriend.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am a 15-year-old girl and when I was 11 I gave my life to Jesus. Until I was 13 everything was fine — I loved Church and was taking part in all sorts of activities. But then things changed and I stopped thinking like a Christian.

Usually once people become Christians they stick with it, but with me it's different. I feel terrible not being able to live for him like I want to.

ANSWER: Your experience is painful, but it is common and you can come through it with a stronger faith and also more confidence in yourself.

When you were 11 and gave yourself to Jesus, you hardly knew what you were giving. Since then, you have begun puberty and are becoming a woman. You are learning that a grown person has doubts and insecurities and finds the habits and companionships of yesterday not so intersting today..

Since you are not the same person who gave yourself, you have to rededicate yourself. And perhaps that means redefining your idea of Jesus. If you look closely at the Gospel record, you will see that Jesus was a person with many sides to His personality. There is much about Him that will still interest you.

At the same time you must form an idea of what the "self" is that you are re-dedicating. At the other end of the relationship, remember that Jesus gave Himself for and to you, for better or for worse — and it looked very much "for worse" for Him on the Cross.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: From the moment we announced our wedding plans, my mother kept harping, "DON'T open your gifts at the reception — it's so boring to the guests."

After four months of hearing this, we decided to go along with her — just to keep her quiet.

We went on a brief honeymoon and returned to find that mother had opened all our gifts.

She justified it by saying that many friends and relatives had stopped by wanting to see what we had received.

Naturally, we were furious. But to top it off, after I had sent off all the hand-written "thank you" notes, I had heard from several people who said, "Your 'thank you' was lovely, but it was not the gift we sent you."

Obviously, Mother got the cards all mixed up.

Do I have the right to feel angry and cheated?

UNFORGIVING

DEAR UNFORGIVING: You have. But please don't be "unforgiving" forever. Mothers sometimes need to be forgiven, too.

DEAR ABBY: Our 18-year-old honor sudent son (I'll call him Bud), has just informed us that he doesn't want to accept the four-year scholarship offered him by a fine eastern college. His reason is his 13-year-old girlfriend. He doesn't want to leave her.

Bud was a bright and sensible boy until he started going with this overdeveloped, aggresive little sexpot. You should see her, Abby. She could easily pass for 21.

The girl's parents don't seem to object, from the way they let Bud stay at her house at all hours of the night. In fact, they appear to encourage this relationship.

My husband and I are worried sick. Our son's entire future seems threatened. Should we talk to the girl's parents? I don't think they realize what a dangerous situation they could be pushing their daughter into.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Don't expect the girl's parents to assume the entire responsibility. At 18, your son should know all the facts of life and a few about the law. (The girl is a minor. He is not.)

Bud may be academically bright, but he's socially immature. I urge you and your husband to communicate your love, understanding and concern to Bud. You can't force him to leave her, but you might rest more easily if you have an open and honest dialogue with him.

DEAR ABBY: A friend says I'm crazy, but I want to know what you think.

Five years ago, my husband and I became very close friends with another couple I'll call Ed and Mary. Two years later I found out that Mary was having an affair with my husband, and as a result our friendship broke up. The situation was heartbreaking for all concerned.

Mary has since begged my forgiveness for having let this happen. Our marriages are both stable now, and I believe I can truly forgive her and my husband, too.

We've missed these friends, Abby, and all of us have learned a lot from that terrible mess.

Do you think we can resume a healthy friendship once again?

FORGIVE AND FORGET

DEAR FORGIVE: If, as you say, your marriages are stable now, there is no reason why you can't resume your friendship. Your maturity and generosity are commendable. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: Three weeks ago my mother died. Last week, right out of the blue, my sister said, "I forgot to give you this," and dropped my mother's wedding ring in my lap!

It seems that the people at the funeral home removed it and gave it to my sister at the time of the funeral. She thought that since I was the oldest daughter, I should have it.

Abby, that ring had been on my mother's finger for 38 years, and it should have been buried with her. I don't want it!

I can't bear to look at that ring. It's driving me crazy. All I can think of when I see it, is how much I wish it were with Mother now — where it belongs. Please help me. — SICK AT HEART

DEAR SICK: Find someone in your family who will appreciate the ring, and give it to her — or him.

Russians Believe in That Ounce of Prevention

Celestial Seasonings (an herb company) and the Citizens Exchange Corp. (a non-profit, people-to-people program) recently sponsored a three-week, 3,000-mile study-tour of health and nutrition through the Soviet Union.

The tour — aside from airline travel to and from Russia — began in Moscow's Red Square and ended in the northern "white nights" of Leningrad. Most of the trip, however, was spent exploring "the garden of the centenarians" in the Transcaucasian republics of Azerbaijan and Georgia, the ancient, exotic region of the U.S.S.R. between the Caspian and Black seas where so many people are rumored to live to such ripe old ages.

One of the Mother Earth's helpers — Sara Pacher — went along on the excursion and reports that "in search of the ways of the long dwellers of this beautiful, healthful section of the Soviet Union, we met with gerontologists, sociologists, physical therapists, nutritionists and health spa and farm personnel. Finally — we even spent some time with a handsome, active 114-year-old tea farm worker who still rides horses and dances in an internationally-acclaimed folk group that is made up mostly of centenarians.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
...it tells you how

"We also discovered, along with modern medical practices, a marvelous reliance on the natural cures and techniques found in old Russian folk medicine. 'We first tested to see if something works, and then we try to find out why it works,' we were told."

Sara further reports that in the USSR, where health care is considered "the property of the people" and is free, an ounce of prevention really is considered less expensive than a pound of cure.

"There is a strong emphasis on preventing a disease entirely or arresting it in its early stages," Sara says. "This might involve a four-week rest cure in one of the country's garden-like health spas with a scientifically prescribed regimen of mineral and mud baths. Or electric, sonar and light therapy. Or inhalation treatments of mineral waters and herbs. Or simply diet, exercise and climate. The trade unions have found that a sanitarium set up in one of the health resorts can pay for itself in four years with increased worker production and lessened sick leave."

Sara's group also visited a city-run Zona Zdorovia (Zone of Health) in Baku on the Caspian Sea. "It was particularly popular with retired people," she notes, "and featured early-morning, outdoor exercises accompanied by accordian music, short sea voyages, hiking and breathing the negatively charged ions of such 'curative' plants as rosemary, geraniums and laurel. Massages and self-massages, music therapy (singing to teach proper breathing techniques and listening to carefully selected music to relieve depression and effect cures), and games — volleyball, table tennis, basketball, etc. — also were on the Zone of Health's program. 'Co-ordination,' we were told, 'is not lost through old age, but through disuse.'"

Still another highlight of the journey through Russia was the spontaneous "herb walks" that took place almost everywhere the group went in the Soviet Union. "Since the region between the Caspian and Black Seas contains more than 4,500 species of plants, including 550 wild herbs, these walks occurred at almost any time and in almost any place: within the ruined walls of a pagan temple, above timberline in the majestic Caucasus mountains, on a Black Sea citrus farm or at any unscheduled bus stop along any country road. These impromptu inspections of the native flora, like so many other spur-of-the-moment things we did, were easy to work into our schedule because, as nearly as I could tell, no 'secret police', followed us around and we were free to come and go as we pleased."

Sara closed her report to the rest of Mother Earth's staff by noting that, as much as everyone on the trip enjoyed seeing the sights of Russia, the "best part of all" was getting to meet and know some of the multi-racial, multi-lingual people of the Soviet Union. "They were surprisingly gracious, friendly, generous and affectionate. And they were as interested in our manners, clothes and customs as we were in theirs."

Soviets Plan Rocket Tests

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union will conduct rocket tests in the central Pacific Oct. 13-31.

A statement by the official Soviet news agency Tass said tests would take place between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. daily in a circular area at a point 35 degrees 01 minutes north latitude and 176 degrees 53 minutes west longitude.

Bio-dex

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- An inattentive moment could cause disastrous repercussions. Watch out in heavy traffic.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Your anxiety over a health matter may be unfounded. Only a thorough check by a doctor can set your mind at rest.

11-15 Positive Cycle- A friend may resent your cheerful optimism. Use diplomacy to smooth the ruffled feathers.

I have often suggested that you postpone major decisions when your Bio-dex is low. But, as a reader pointed out, some financial decisions just cannot be put off. The answer is to seek advice. A lawyer may be your best bet. Yes, I know legal fees can be high, but timely expert advice can often save you thousands of dollars in the long run.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF REPORTERS . . . ?

DORADO, Puerto Rico (AP) — Reporters had to be a little frustrated Thursday following a brief question-and-answer exchange with Prince Philip.

The prince is presiding at a meeting of the International Equestrian Federation's executive committee here. At a break in the meeting, he was asked his opinion of the Paso Fino horse, a breed unique to Puerto Rico.

The response:

"Interesting. What am I supposed to say?"

Question: "What kind of a polo pony would one make?"

Philip: 'It wouldn't."

Q: "Why not?"

A: "You don't know much about horses, do you?"

Q: "What do you think of Puerto Ricans?"

A: "They're . . . like Puerto Ricans, aren't they?"

Q: "And what do you think of Puerto Rico?"

A: "It's just like Puerto Rico."

Smoke Alarms Get Complete Approval

WASHINGTON (WP) — Citing a newly released Canadian government study that shows smoke detectors to be 85 percent effective in giving the first warning of a home fire, the consumer Product Safety Commission Thursday gave its complete endorsement of the devices for use in American homes.

CPSC commissioner David Pittle said more than 20 million smoke detectors will be installed in homes across the country by the end of this year, adding that he believed strongly that all detectors endorsed by reputable laboratories — regardless of type — are effective safegurds against deaths and injuries caused by home fires.

"We can't undescore enough how much we think consumers ought to have smoke detectors in their homes," Pittle said.

While Pittle said he could not recommend specific brand names of smoke detectors, he said consumers should look for the trademark of a recognized testing laboratory on the box or the product itself. He named Underwriters Labs (UL) and Factory Mutual (FM) as two such labs.

The CPSC said it was also making available to the general public a booklet entitled "What you should know about Smoke Detectors," which explains how and why detectors should be used.

The commission discounts recent controversy over which of two types of smoke detectors are better.

"They can both do the job," Pittle said, reporting that some firms are planning to manufacture detectors using the technology of both types. "This is a perfect example of the marketplace responding in its fullest glory," he said.

One type of detector is the ionization model, which uses a small and carefully shielded bit of radioactive material that "ionizes" the air in the detector's smoke chamber. As a result, a weak electrical current flows through that chamber. But when tiny particles of smoke drift into the chamber, they reduce the electrical current flow, causing the detector circuit to turn on the alarm horn or buzzer.

Although several groups have protested the presence of radioactive materials in the detector, the CPSC booklet quotes the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as saying that there is no significant radioactivity danger. "If you held an ionization smoke detector close to you for eight hours a day through a whole year," the report states, "you would receive only a tenth as much radiation as you'd get on one round trip airline flight across the USA."

The second type of detector uses a photoelectric cell that detects smoke by catching light rays deflected by smoke particles onto a photocell. When there are enough particles reflecting enough light, the photocell produces an electrical current that sets off the alarm.

The study by the Canadian Ministry of Housing evaluated some 64 fires in homes in which smoke detectors had been installed. "Analysis shows that the smoke detectors gave the initial warning in 54 instances," the report states. In at least 21 cases, the study found, the detectors may have saved lives.

Pittle said 18 states have mandatory smoke detector legislation already, while another 15 have partial inducements or legislation.

Pittle also called upon consumers to develop family escape routes in case of fire, and to have members of the family practice using the escape routes at night.

Mum Reporter Again Jailed

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — New York Times reporter Myron Farber returned to jail Thursday, still refusing to surrender notes in a murder case and stating that his belief in the U.S. first amendment is more important to him than his freedom.

He was ordered kept in jail until he complies with a court order to surrender the notes.

It was the third time in four months that Farber has entered the Bergen County Jail as the central figure in a fight over what happens when the rights to a free press and a fair trial conflict. The case is under appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Farber has been ordered to turn over notes compiled while investigating a number of deaths that figure in the case of a surgeon charged with murdering patients with lethal overdoses of curare.

The notes were sought by the doctor's lawyer. Farber has refused to turn them over to a judge for inspection, claiming that even that action would violate his sources' confidentiality — and thus his freedom to gather news in the public interest.

A central argument has been that he has been denied a proper hearing on the subpoena's scope and necessity.

At the trial Thursday, Farber was cited 19 more times for contempt because of his continued refusal to turn over his notes. But no new penalties were assessed, and it was on a contempt finding handed down several months ago that he was sent back to jail. Trial Judge William Arnold said he would hold off further action on the new citations.

The surgeon, Dr. Mario Jascalevich, is on trial on charges he murdered three patients at Riverdell Hospital in Oradell, N.J., in the mid-1960s. In late 1975 and early 1976, Farber investigated and wrote about the deaths, which officials could not then explain.

For the first time on Vancouver Island, Friends and Company now offer you a new in-salon service — Trichoanalysis. Get the truth about your hair with hair analysis — the scientific inside story. Our new Redken Trichoscope II shows us what your hair needs to look its best.

First, we take sample strands of your hair, place them under a high power microscope and on the wide screen, you see for yourself, from the structure of each strand whether it's healthy or needs treatment. Next, we test the strands for strength and structural competency on the Redken Trichogram.

These test results are then tabulated and we give you a complete picture of the state of your hair, whether it's healthy or needs salon treatment.

Trichoanalysis takes the guesswork out of salon treatment and helps us avoid unnecessary treatment or harmful perming and bleaching. It shows the stylist the proper path to follow and the products to use to restore the structural competency and to maintain brilliance and managability of the hair.

N-War to Mark Pope's Reign?

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Roman Catholic prelate and former exorcist writing in the latest issue of the Vatican weekly Osservatore della Domenica says a worldwide disaster, possibly a nuclear war, might mark the reign of the new pope to be elected in the conclave starting Saturday.

Msgr. Corrado Balducci referred to the so-called Prophecies of St. Malachy, an ancient list of Latin mottos for each pope, and said an impending Third World War might be written under the motto for the next pope — De Labore Solf or Of The Fatigue of the Sun.

It is very unusual for a Vatican publication to grant even indirect support to any of the "prophecies," generally viewed as a 16th-century forgery under the name of the 12th-century Irish monk-archbishop St. Malachy.

"It could refer to a minor detail, such as something in the coat of arms of the new pope or some other irrelevant circumstance," Balducci said of the motto Of The Fatigue Of The Sun.

But he said some read into the motto "a more important meaning, referring to the time in which he (the new pope) will live. In this context, during the next pontificate, a great cataclysm will occur, which most likely could be the Third World War."

Balducci wrote this would be followed by "a period of peace and tranquility" under another pope. But as far as the cataclysm theory goes he said the so-called Secret of Fatima reported to have predicted "a great war" for the second half of our century too.

The Vatican never published the secret. But, Balducci wrote, a text printed in Italy and West Germany years ago "seems to be acceptable as authentic." He quoted the text as saying:

"A great punishment will fall on mankind . . . in the second half of the 20th century . . . Satan . . . will succeed in seducing the spirits of the great scientists who invent the arms with which it will be possible to destroy a large part of mankind in a few minutes . . . . A great war will be unleashed in the second half of the 20th century . . . millions and millions of men will envy the dead."

PM BARELY ELECTED

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Parliament accepted Liberal party leader Ola Ullsten as Sweden's new prime minister today but approval was so thin he will head one of the weakest minority governments in Europe.

Ullsten was cleared with only 39 votes of approval, all from his own party. Sixty-six conservatives and Communists voted against him and 215 lawmakers abstained.

Under Sweden's constitution a new prime minister is elected if he does not receive more than one-half the parliament members against him in the vote.

The election ended a week-long government crisis following Centre party leader Thorbjorn Falldin's resignation over Sweden's use of nuclear power.

Stalemate For Sealers

KIRKWALL, Scotland (UPI) — The ship of protesters delaying the Orkney Islands slaughter of 5,000 seals and a boatload of riflemen hired to shoot the furry creatures both rode at anchor in the foggy North Eea today while the government decides its next step.

"Each day delayed is a victory for us," said Pete Wilkinson, a spokesman for the California-based Greenpeace Foundation. "We're hoping to delay the slaughter another day."

Norwegian sharpshooters have been hired by the government to kill 1,000 cows and 4,000 pups in a culling measure to reduce the herd of 60,000 gray seals because their appetite for fish is too costly for Scotland's fishing industry.

Special regulations mean the hunters have only three weeks to carry out the slaughter. Four days already have passed without any seals killed as both hunters and protesters circle the bleak rocky islets off northern Scotland waiting for the next move.

Early today the red-painted hunters' ship Kyrtungen, and the green Rainbow Warrior manned by the protesters were anchored two miles off Askerry, a barren and undistinguished clump of rock uninhabited by either seals or people.

The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries, which granted the hunting license said it cannot be extended beyond three weeks, Wilkinson said. This is probably because after three weeks, baby seals are old enough to take to the water and the Seal Protection Act forbids shootng seals in the sea.

The hunters also have orders not to shoot if there is any danger to human life.

Small groups of protesters are camped on four of the larger islands in an attempt to get between the hunters' guns and the seals or, as a last resort, to shoo the creatures into the sea.

Animal welfare officials have asked for another meeting with Scottish Secretary Bruce Millan, one of the ministers involved in the decision to shoot the seals.

The government says the seal colonies have doubled in recent years and now eat an estimated 65,000 tons of fish a year, mainly cod, at a cost to the fishing industry of around $40 million.

The protesters say there is insufficient scientific evidence about how many seals there are and what they eat to justify wholesale killings.

The Orkney Islands, where the drama is being played out, lie off the northern tip of Scotland.

Shevchenko Ducks Queries

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Soviet defector Arkady Shevchenko went into hiding Thursday after accusing Soviet agents and the U.S. news media of exploiting his personal relationship with a female professional escort.

In a statement released through a Washington law firm, Shevchenko said he had at one time had a close personal relationship with Judy Chavez, 22, and had supported her "generously."

Shevchenko was the top Soviet official at the United Nations Secretariat until he went into hiding six months ago after being granted political asylum in the United States.

On Thursday he denied Miss Chavez's allegation that the money came from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA.)

Miss Chavez, in a television interview Monday, alleged that Shevchenko had paid her between $35,000 and $40,000 since he defected in April.

The CIA denied that the funds paid to Miss Chavez came from the agency, and said Shevchenko had received a substantial sum of money for his service with the UN.

Shevchenko, 47, the highest ranking Soviet citizen ever to seek political asylum in the United States, is now a consultant with the CIA.

But Miss Chavez's allegations have forced the agency to provide the defector with a new identity and location.

In his statement, Shevchenko said: "When it became known that I had decided to live in the United States, agents and supporters of the Soviet Union spread lies about my personal stability.

"It is true that I know Miss Chavez and at one time had a close personal relationship with her. It is also true that during this period I supported her generously."

He added: "I am deeply saddened by Miss Chavez's recent behaviour, but at least I can guess at her motivation. I am left to wonder at the motives of the televison network which exploited her and damaged me," the statement said.

Miss Chavez said she is writing a book about her relationship with Mr Shevchenko.

His Concerns Are Different

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — While most delegates are inclined to worry about things like the Middle East and nuclear war, Sir Eric Gairy is concerned about flying saucers and people who strip bark off trees.

Sir Eric is prime minister of the tiny Caribbean island of Grenada, and his is never the run-of-the-mill speech at the UN General Assembly.

Sir Eric has been trying for years to get the United Nations to set up an agency for monitoring and reporting on unidentified flying objects.

Every year the UN General Assembly politely puts him off, and every year he comes back.

But his latest address took a new twist. Sir Eric took up the cause of non-human rights — "the rights of life other than human life, animals of the forest, pets at home, reptiles, birds, sensitive plants, flowers . . . "

All these, he said, have a right to life — but regrettably, too many humans trample on them.

"Suppose some other creature came down to crush us to bits, beating the skins off our backs as we do trees ?"

ODDS POOR FOR SPLIT TWINS

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Siamese twins Sonya and Tonya Bain survived the surgery to separate them but doctors say they remain "seriously ill, and each has separate, serious heart problems."

After the separation surgery Thursday, the twins — born Oct. 3 in nearby Raleigh — each underwent another operation to repair their faulty hearts.

The girls weighed about 12 pounds together at birth. They were joined from the breastbone to the navel and shared part of their hearts and livers before surgery.

"Their odds against going through this (successfully) were horrendous from the very beginning, and we're just one step down the way," said Dr. Howard Filston, head of pediatric surgery at Duke and one of four surgeons who operated on the twins.

"It's too early after surgery to give you a firm answer in terms of the direction in which they are headed," Dr. Steven Gross, a neonatalogist, said Thursday night.

The twins are listed in serious condition in the centre's intensive care nursury, a regional centre for babies with serious health problems.

Doctors had said before the operation that the chances of both twins surviving were less than 10 per cent.

The girls' parents, David Bain, 39, and his wife, Geraldine, 36, of Fuquay-Varina, N.C., were at the hospital during the operation but cannot be reached for comment. Filston said they "seem to have withstood the day quite well."

Bain is an $123-a-week technician in the state agriculture department. He and his wife have seven other children.

Doctors had hoped to wait several months before they separated the twins but their conditions deteriorated drastically late Wednesday and doctors decided to operate.

The twins face more surgery to correct heart valve problems and to build rib cages if they survive. Doctors have not said which twin has the better chance for survival.

Siamese twin births are extremely rare.

Firestone Tries to Limit Recall

WASHINGTON (WP) — As public pressure mounts on the U.S. government to order a recall of Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is negotiating with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. over the scope of a voluntary recall.

The major stumbling block, according to sources close to the talks, is Firestone's insistance that any voluntary recall include only tires manufactured before May 1, 1976. The company manufactured the tire for another two years after that date, but insists that technological changes made in tires produced after the May 1, 1976 date are much safer than earlier versions.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader and House Commerce Subcommittee Chairman John Moss (Dem.-Calif.) each sent letters to NHTSA administrator Joan Claybrook Thursday urging her to resolve the case, which has dragged on for three months since NHTSA made an initial determination that the 500 had a "safety-related defect" that led to thousands of tire failures.

Despite the fact that NHTSA says it has a case for a mandatory recall — one in which the government orders the company to replace all 500's still on the road at its own expense — it has attempted to negotiate a settlement with the tiremaker under which it recalls the tires on its own.

The reason for the negotiations, sources say, is the opinion of government regulators that Firestone would take such a recall order though a prolonged court fight, arguing that the government cannot pinpoint any specific defect.

Despite the fact that the government has repeatedly given Firestone attorneys deadlines to respond to "final offers," the company has returned time after time with counter-offers NHTSA felt worthy of consideration.

The company is trying to establish that some combination of a dozen or so technological changes in the 500 during its production life (1972-1978) resulted in tires with far fewer consumer problems.

The Moss subcommittee has said that one out of every six Firestone 500's ever made was returned by its owner to the company for replacement. In addition, the Moss subcommittee reported, one out of every 11 suffered tread separation, a condition that leads to blowouts and other problems.

But NHTSA has had considerable difficulty attempting to validate Firestone's claims that tires manufactured in late years were better than earlier ones, thus justifying a limited recall. NHTSA has already been involved in a prolonged court fight with Firestone to force the company to hand over an estimated 30 million documents relating to consumer complaint information.

NHTSA officials have said privately that their own investigation have given some support to Firestone's argument for a limited recall, but they have experienced considerable difficulty in pinpointing the date when the tires were improved enough to justify not recalling them.

The Center for Auto Safety, a consumer group active in the Firestone case from the beginning, threw another wrench in the talks Thursday by presenting NHTSA with a case study of a Firestone tire failure in Alabama last August. In that case, Center director Clarence Ditlow pointed out, the failure involved a seemingly unprompted blowout of a Firestone 500 which was made in December, 1976.

Another problem has been one of communications. Firestone hired the Clark Clifford law firm specifically to negotiate with NHTSA on this matter. NHTSA officials point out that the law firm has been cooperative, but has problems reaching the right Firestone officials, and has had to learn about the tire industry while negotiations are going on.

Congressman Flood On the Take?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representative Daniel Flood, a flamboyant fixture in Congress for more than three decades, stands accused of trading his substantial power for tens of thousands of dollars in bribes from numerous individuals and organizations seeking federal aid.

The Pennsylvania Democrat, indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on bribery and conspiracy charges, maintains he is not guilty and that he will be vindicated in court and by his loyal constituents at the polls in November.

Flood, who will be 75 next month, said in a statement: "I deny all these allegations, totally and unequivocally. I am confident that I will be proven innocent in a court of law.

"Neither absurd charges nor their attendant innuendos will prevent my constituents from expressing once more their belief and trust in my integrity."

Flood, a former actor, is known for showmanship both in his manner of speech and appearance. He has represented the coal-mining district of Pennsylvania around Wilkes-Barre since 1945.

Flood was indicted Sept. 5 by a federal grand jury in Los Angeles, Calif., on charges he lied to a trial jury and another grand jury when he denied receiving payoffs.

If convicted on all charges, he faces maximum prison sentences of 15 years on each bribery count, five years for conspiracy and five years on each of three perjury counts.

The 10-count indictment returned Thursday charges that Flood conspired with former aide Stephen Elko to take $65,000 in bribes from various sources and 100 shares of stock in a Pennsylvania bank.

In addition, Flood is accused of receiving $16,500 for himself from various sources and seeking an additional $100,000 from the developer of a townhouse project in Pennsylvania.

The indictment says that in return, Flood used his influence with U.S. government agencies to obtain contracts, grants and other favors for those who paid him.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Hands played by Benito Garozzo, of Italy, are legion. In today's deal, which came up in a tournament back in 1957, Garozzo gave a neat demonstration of the talent that was to evidence itself in the years that were to follow. He was sitting in the South seat.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ A Q 7
♡ Q 10 8
◇ K 7
♣ 10 6 4 3 2

WEST	EAST
♠ 10 6 5 3 2	♠ K 9 4
♡ 6 3 2	♡ 7
◇ Q 10 6 4	◇ J 9 8 5 2
♣ 9	♣ A Q J 8

SOUTH
♠ J 8
♡ A K J 9 5 4
◇ A 3
♣ K 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

North made a good decision when he bid only four hearts over South's jump to three hearts. A more optimistic player might well have bid five hearts instead.

After winning the opening club lead with his ace, East returned the queen of clubs. Had Garozzo made the automatic play of putting up his king, he probably would have gone down. West would have ruffed the king; and if he then shifted to a spade, Garozzo couldn't avoid losing a trick in this suit to East's king. And, of course, East's jack of clubs would also win a trick.

But Garozzo made the winning play when he followed with the club seven on the second club lead, allowing East's queen to capture the trick. East next returned the eight of clubs, and Garozzo's king was ruffed by West. West then led a spade, the trick being won by dummy's ace.

A fourth club lead was now made, East followed with the jack, and Garozzo ruffed with the ace of trumps. The queen and ten of trumps then gathered in the outstanding trumps, after which Garozzo discarded his jack of spades on the board's established fifth club, the only one remaining in the deck.

Had West's initial club lead been from a worthless doubleton (9-x), Garozzo's failure to have covered the queen with the king at trick two would have cost him an overtrick. However, Garozzo's sole concern was not the making of an overtrick, but rather the fulfillment of his game contract. And by not covering East's queen with his king at trick two, South made sure that he would avoid the loss of a spade trick.

Tom chuckled. "Sure, but I'm not telling you. You'll have to ask the lady herself."

Send Her Dozen Roses and She'll Spit Three Times

"What a healthy looking boy," a friend said admiringly. "He looks so happy."

The mother spat three times over her left shoulder.

She was not being rude, but simply taking out a supernatural insurance policy on her son's future health — performing the age-old Russian equivalent of the Western knock-on-wood tradition.

Ever since the Russian Revolution of 1917, Soviet leaders have waged a war of propaganda against superstition, which doctrinaire Communists abhor almost as much as they do religion.

The editors of the 1976 edition of the Great Soviet Encyclopedia apparently decided superstition is no longer a factor in Russian life — they gave it no entry — but the same work's 1956 edition said:

"Superstitions are related to the absence of a correct, scientific conception of the relations and laws of natural and social phenomena . . . In the capitalist system, superstitions are supported by the dependence and seeming helplessness of people before the uncontrolled forces of capitalism."

Superstition seems to be one of the main spices of life for the Russian people.

The black cat is as much feared here as it is in Western Europe, North and South America and parts of Asia. But other popular beliefs seem to be unique.

A Russian buying flowers will always choose an odd number if he is taking them home or presenting them to a friend. If the flowers are to mark a grave in a cemetery, the number will always be even.

Apparently an odd number seems incomplete to a Russian, so an odd number of flowers in a cemetery would virtually encourage a new death.

The sinister connotations of an even number of flowers are so strong, Russians openly acknowledge, that even a senior Communist party ideologist would probably be shaken and offended if he were offered a bouquet of say, six roses.

A knife accidentally dropped on the floor of a Russian home means that a man will soon be coming to the house. A dropped fork indicates the imminent arrival of a woman.

A superstitious Russian will snap up a coin found lying heads up on the street. He will not touch a coin lying tails up — bad luck.

Russians do not throw spilled salt over their shoulder. But if any salt is spilled it means there is going to be a blazing argument in the household.

A Russian bridegroom does not carry his bride over the threshold of their new home. But they do put their cat inside before setting foot inside the door.

Virtually no Russian feels comfortable shaking hands or exchanging greetings across the threshold of an open door. Either the guest must come in or the host must go out before civilities can be performed.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad service. Our courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order, and remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Walkout At Sawmill

QUESNEL (CP) — A walkout of workers Thursday night at the Ernst Forest Products sawmill here shut down the mill and the company's main planer.

The walkout apparently occurred because of a dispute over floating holidays. Workers said a meeting Thursday with mill manager Dick Scott failed to resolve the dispute because Scott refused to talk with them until they return to work.

Overnight and day shift workers refused to cross picket lines, and the dispute has affected about 200 workers.

Time for Hand Weeding

A dry mild day is an opportunity to find the time for hand weeding among plants. Just now there is a new crop of seedlings from wild grasses, thistles, and the Hairy Cat's Ear which is mistaken for a dandelion at this time of the year when it is prevalent in lawns.

These wildlings arrive on the wind either from nearby untended lots or via the bird route. The little bit of rain has made a suitable growing place for them is fertile soil.

Seedlings are really so much more easily removed than are the established roots in spring that it seems silly to allow them to remain.

However, it does take time and effort to work at ground level between shrubs and perennials to be sure all seedlings are taken out. As usual, a ground level job means becoming better acquainted with the plants. A thick spongy kneeling pad is a help but not much, for one must still get up every few minutes to readjust one's position. Thin cotton gloves are useful for they keep the hands fairly dry and thereby delay their getting too cold to feel the seedlings. A small hand trowel lifts out larger weeds.

An old can or low fruit basket kept handy is good for collecting each handful of weeds for in this climate they may well become re-rooted if left on the soil. And we need the fresh green of young weeds to go into the compost heap.

A bulb bed planted with daffs nearly a month ago has since sprouted all kinds of unwanted seedlings; with a light hand, a scuffle hoe (having a flat blade in line with the handle) makes short work of them for they will be easily dislodged from the soft soil without touching the bulb tips below.

Where plants are growing among rocks it is a matter of an accurate eye to get between plants to pull out unwanted seedlings.

One or two of these may have been growing unnoticed for a year or more. A pointed trowel with an inch wide blade will in most cases be ideal for removing the root without disturbance to the rock plants.

While working among these little plants, some may be found to have offsets making their own roots. Here's a chance to take that new piece from a Saxifrage or Sempervivum and put it into a crevice where a more finicky plant died this dry summer.

Old flower stems may be found on the rock dianthus. If seedpods are found still unopened, the seeds are scattered in another vacant spot to establish a new colony of these delightful plants.

Fallen leaves from deciduous shrubs and trees are not yet a problem. Although making the wonderful soil which we all need so badly, large flat leaves create hazards when they lodge on flat plants.

Our winter rain and comparatively mild temperatures cause heating which in turn begins the decaying process of the fallen leaves. As this occurs, the plant foliage underneath (frequently of evergreen nature in the rock garden) also becomes warmed. The decay organisms get to work on the living growth with the end result of our finding half rotted plants in spring.

During the next month or so fallen leaves must be removed from flat growing plants such as dianthus and others, heathers, prostrate junipers and similar, the leaves to be composted for soil making.

At present the weed seedlings are springing up each day to keep us occupied in whatever odd moments we can spare for the work, but it will be odd moments well spent when and if we count the seedlings as we remove them from the beds and borders.

Historic Treasure Trove Uncovered in Seed Bags

PARIS (UPI) — Hidden treasures are more myth than reality but, like every myth, even that one comes true once in a while.

Two huge chests and a couple of seed bags have been discovered in the attic of the Chateau de Thoiry, 25 miles west of Paris, containing over 2,000 pounds of historic papers, some of which shed new light on events spanning seven centuries.

The documents were found by Viscount Paul de la Panouse, 34, in his father's chateau which has been in the Panouse family for the past 400 years. They include the private letters of French monarchs ranging from Philippe Le Bel in the 13th century to Napoleon I in the 19th.

The chests also contained the original manuscripts of two waltzes by Frederic Chopin which up to now had only been known in a version erroneously compiled from memory by one of Chopin's students: the Bulls of two Popes — Clement XIV and Urban III; coded reports by Louis XV's most famous spy, the Chevalier of Eon; minutes of the trials of transvestites in the 18th century; as well as letters concerning the American Revolution by Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and the Marquis de Lafayette.

Although the documents discovered in July are still being sorted and examined by experts, they have brought to light a certain number of historical facts — quaint and serious.

Among the serious finds is a letter marked with the seal of Philippe Le Bel and dated 1285 which is the earliest document bearing the French royal seal discovered up to now.

The documents also include royal décrees bearing the childish, scrawled signature of King Louis XIV at the beginning of his reign, a letter by his daughter, Marie-Louise of Savoy, thanking him for marrying her to King Philip V of Spain. There are also letters in which Louis XV expresses his grief and bewilderment at the death of his daughter Henriette and Henri III begs the bishops of France to pray God to give him a son.

In arts and letters, the archives are equally rich.

There are portraits of [illegible] zac as a child by Eugene Lue, letters by Voltaire, Lamartine, Alexandre Dumas and Georges Sand. The two original waltzes by Chopin, Opus 18 and Opus 70 number 1, have been authenticated by American pianist Byron Janis, a personal friend of Paul de la Panouse.

"The waltzes were given by Chopin in 1833 to Clemence de la Panouse, who was a great benefactress of the arts in her time," the viscount said. "Other manuscripts by Chopin of the same waltzes, but in later versions, came to light in the United States 10 years ago and are now at Yale University. But these are the earliest versions of the waltzes and are very different from the others and from the versions transcribed by Chopin's student Fontana."

Almost as fascinating as the documents, is the story behind their survival and discovery.

During the French Revolution of 1789, the family had gone into hiding along with many other French aristocrats but the villagers of Thoiry prevented the revolutionaries from looting the castle and destroying the archives.

More recently, during the Second World War when the chateau was requisitioned by the German troops, the caretaker and his son hid all the family archives in seed sacks and chests and stowed them away in attics and nearby farms.

Paul de la Panouse, who has been searching and collecting the hidden archives since the age of 12, had already assembled over 50,000 documents before finding the two latest chests which contain the most valuable pieces.

He now plans to store all the documents together and regularly organize exhibitions on given themes to enable the public to benefit from them. The exhibitions, the first of which will be titled "The Kings and Thoiry," will be held in the Thoiry chateau which is at the center of the Thoiry African reserve, founded by Paul de la Panouse's father, and currently the largest such reserve outside the African continent.

In addition to the archive exhibitions, the viscount and his American wife, Annabelle, of Minneapolis, Minn., plan to re-create ancient gardens in the Thoiry park and open them to the public. Annabelle also plans to publish a book of 16th and 17th century French recipes which she is currently compiling from the information provided by the archives.

Oil Price Mixed Blessing

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The president of the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council said today that although higher oil prices have helped heavy-oil producers in Canada, they may not have helped conventional oil discoveries.

Lordon MacNabb of Ottawa told the World Energy Conference that the higher price has enabled the profitable production of oil sands, previously uneconomical because of the high cost of production.

"In order to pay the producers the price we will be treating synthetic crude production as if it was an import," he said.

The newly-opened Syncrude Canada Ltd. plant receives world-level price, now about $15 a barrel, compared with $12.75 for domestically-produced conventional crude.

MacNabb said that while the domestic price of conventional crude has increased from $3.80 a barrel in 1974, the price of natural gas has not been increased by a corresponding degree.

40 U.S. CONVICTS ON THE WAY HOME

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's prison population was reduced by 40 Thursday when the first group of United States citizens imprisoned in Canada returned home to serve the remainders of their sentences in the U.S. under a convict exchange treaty recently agreed upon by the two countries.

In return, the U.S. is sending back 29 Canadians convicted of crimes in the U.S., federal penitentiary spokesman Jack Stewart said. It is not yet known how many of the U.S. prisoners will go to British Columbia prisons, he said.

Most of the Canadians have been serving time in U.S. federal prisoners, while seven or eight will leave Texas jails. So far, only Texas and the U.S. federal penitentiary service have ratified the treaty.

Cable Rate Hike to Pay For CBC-2

OTTAWA (CP) — This country's 3.5 million subscribers to cable television would have their rates increased in the next year or two to help finance a second CBC network in both official languages under a proposal placed Thursday before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission.

But officials of the Canadian Cable Television Association representing the cable stations across the country said subscribers may balk at the plan if the second television network forces an American station off the regular cable television channels.

It should be available by converter only for the time being, they suggested.

Charles Keeting, a Dartmouth, N.S. cable owner and national chairman of the association, said he was surprised at the suggestion of CBC president Al Johnson that the so-called CBC-2 network should be carried on a regular cable channel even if it were to bump an American station.

He said in previous discussions with Johnson there had seemed agreement this would not be the case.

The CBC wants to establish by 1980 a second English-language and French-language service available only by cable. It would carry more serious fare than the existing services and would screen reruns of prestige CBC programs. It would carry no commercials.

Keating told the commission the cable companies welcome the idea and are prepared to help finance it through their subscribers.

But cable operators wanted to play an active role in the new network and not just be bill collectors. They wanted to be represented on the board of directors and also wanted an active role played by independent program producers.

Jean Fortier, vice-chairman of the commission, said the CRTC doesn't have the authority to place a tax or surcharge on cable subscribers.

If each cable company were to apply for a rate increase, it would be judged independently and perhaps in some cases refused.

Pattern Price Fixing Fine

TORONTO (CP) — Dominion Simplicity Patterns Ltd., a company that manufactures and sells clothing patterns, was fined $7,500 on Thursday after pleading guilty to illegally trying to keep up the price of its products.

An investigation began after Super S Drugs Ltd. in Calgary carried the patterns at regular prices but picked up thousands more for six or seven cents each at an auction.

The drug company then sold 12,000 of these bargain patterns for nine to 29 cents instead of the regular price of $1.50 each.

Despite pressure from Simplicity to charge regular prices, the drug stores continued to give discounts on the patterns.

When federal anti-combines investigators were told of the matter, they found two letters in Simplicity's offices, saying that the retail price of Simplicity is rigidly maintained.

Julius Issac, federal prosecutor, told county court that Simplicity sold $11.4 million worth of goods in 1976 in Canada and had a net income of more than $1 million.

Views Sought On Abortion

EDMONTON (CP) — Candidates for the next provincial general election are being polled for their views on abortion by Campaign Life, an Alberta anti-abortion group.

Kathleen Toth, Campaign Life chairman, said the 250-member group favors restricting abortions to cases where the woman's life is in danger.

PRIZE OF GOLD GETS ITS LUMPS

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Otto Jelinek accused Loto Canada Thursday of showing a lack of confidence in the Canadian dollar because it is offering a $1 million prize in gold.

Jelinek (High Park-Humber Valley) told the Commons that New York money dealers have taken note of the fact that the federal lottery's Halloween draw will offer an instant prize of gold bullion.

Loto Canada should be ordered "to rectify this embarrassing situation," Jelinek said.

"I'm very sorry that the honorable member does not want us to help the mining industry in Canada," Finance Minister Jean Chretien replied jokingly.

The gold will be awarded as an instant bonus prize to someone who buys a regular lottery ticket. The winning number for the gold has already been selected and will appear under a scratch-off section of one $10 ticket.

Alta. Alleges Plot In Sales Of Grain

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta farmers may be the victims of a federal political plot to stop them from selling grain this year, Agriculture Minister Marv Moore said Thursday.

Moore said he is "very suspicious" export sales are being channelled to Saskatchewan while granaries fill up across Alberta.

His suspicions are based on a relatively rapid movement of Saskatchewan wheat and barley to the ports of Vancouver and Thunder Bay while Alberta grain is sitting in elevators.

Moore cited a substantial difference in grain movements in Saskatchewan compared with Alberta, and a disparity in barley quota timing that also favored the central prairie province.

Moore said the advantages Saskatchewan farmers have enjoyed this year could be due to the "interests" of Otto Lang, the Saskatoon Liberal MP and minister in charge of the Canadian wheat board.

Prairie grain movements sometimes favor certain areas due to sales of specific grain types not grown all across the prairies, or to a concentration of sales through one port, he said.

But neither of those situations appear to explain the disparities this year, Moore said.

He said the lower grades of wheat harvested this year in Alberta may contribute to the disparities.

A meeting between the wheat board and the minister was set for next Wednesday to try to determine the cause of the shift eastward.

ARBITRATION EYED IN BOUNDARY PACTS

OTTAWA (CP) — Complicated issues involved in negotiations on maritime boundaries with the United States likely will go to arbitration, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Thursday.

Talks now under way with the U.S. will determine what can be settled through negotiation, what must go to arbitration and what form that arbitration might take.

The negotiations so far have proceeded "amicably but I fear not rapidly," the minister told Lloyd Crouse (PC—South Shore).

Negotiators said earlier they are optimistic of settling West Coast boundary issues, but the Atlantic is more difficult and adjudication by the world court or third party arbitration might be needed to set a boundary line on Georges Bank between Nova Scotia and Maine.

NERVE POISON WARNING ON SOFT DRINK ADDITIVE

HAMILTON (CP) — Some canned soft drinks containing the chemical additive stannous chloride may cause damage to the central nervous system, a United States chemist said Thursday.

Dr. John Wood, director of the Fresh Water Biological Research Institute at University of Minnesota, said micro-organisms in the body can convert the stannous chloride to methyl tin, which can poison the central nervous system.

Stamous chloride is added to some soft drinks to prevent acid oxidization of the cans.

Dr. Wood, speaking at the Canada Centre for Inland Waters, said research has not yet determined how much canned pop must be consumed before symptoms of central nervous system damage appear.

The danger is limited to those beverages whose level of acidity is low, he said.

Symptoms are similar to those of mercury poisoning. They start with numbness in the fingers and lips and eventually increase to problems with co-ordination, difficulty with speech and hearing and impaired walking ability.

Food Firms Fight Back On Nutrition

OTTAWA (CP) — Health and nutrition experts cannot justify accusations that the food industry neglects nutrition, say industry spokesmen.

Andrew Barrett, of H. J. Heinz Co. of Toronto, said Thursday at a nutritional education conference there is a communication gap between nutritionists and the food industry because the former are not aware of what the industry is doing.

About 150 government, food industry, health and education representatives are meeting to discuss nutrition education for the public.

"I'm very concerned about the attitude of nutritionists because they are not as up to date as they should be about what we're doing," said Barrett, who represents the firm's infant-foods section.

"We have had four nutritionists on staff for the last four years with three at masters level (university degree) or better and one who acts as a consultant."

Heinz, which supplies more than 75 per cent of the country's baby food, recently removed salt and reduced sugar content in its baby food products.

David Clark, president of Thomas J. Lipton Ltd. of Toronto, said the food industry is also concerned about those attitudes because health professionals and nutritionists are opinion leaders who can influence the media and government.

"At least they could understand some of the problems from our side," he said.

Clark said the food industry cannot do what is good for the consumer whether she (or he) likes it or not.

"The battlefield is littered with those who have tried and failed," he said referring to a recent protein-packed product used to make hamburgers (known as soyburgers). "That was a bomb because the consumer wasn't ready. But at some point in maybe five or 10 years the consumer will be ready for such a product."

Clark added that the food industry has set up a special study group to examine methods of meeting nutritional needs of the consumer.

A Philosopher John Wayne

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark insulted and mimicked one another in the Commons Thursday as they sought support for their respective policies on the economy and the constitution.

Trudeau painted Clark as a weak leader enslaved by the demands of ambitious premiers intent upon emasculating the federal government.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, took shots at them both, but began his punchy speech by defending Clark against Trudeau's criticisms.

"Suddenly he came alive," Broadbent said of Trudeau's attack on Clark. "Why? Because he likes to fight.

"The prime minister likes to combine two contradictory attitudes — that of a philosopher and that of John Wayne."

Clark insisted that Trudeau is more interested in confrontation than solutions.

Clark then assumed a classic Trudeau pose — suit jacket open, thumbs stuck in vest pockets and quoted statements by the prime minister which have riled audiences.

Trudeau imitated familiar Clark poses by drawing in his chin, lowering his voice and chopping the air with one stiff arm.

The prime minister accused Clark and his Conservatives of using the monarchy as "a political football."

"I am telling them (Conservatives) that if there is a debate on the monarchy in this country, if we do find people responding to their invitation to set up groups to protect Her Majesty . . . there may be other groups will form to attack the monarchy, and then we will see a fight in this country on a political basis, a division which will have divisive effects."

Liberal MPs wildly applauded the prime minister, copying the Conservatives by clapping — something new to Canada. Traditionally, MPs in Canada and other Commonwealth countries thump their desks to express their emotions. The French national assembly and Quebec national assembly both use clapping.

Trudeau jokingly suggested the Conservatives, by introducing clapping, were revolutionary and destroying a beloved tradition of the British Empire.

When Tories Fall Out. . .

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Claude Wagner warned Thursday he will sue former colleague Roche LaSalle for libel if LaSalle does not retract statements made on a French-language television program.

In a lawyer's letter delivered to LaSalle's Parliament Hill office Thursday afternoon, Wagner gave the Conservative MP from Joliette three days to "retract publicly in a complete and unconditional manner."

The retraction demand concerned a remark LaSalle made on the Radio Canada program, Ce Soir (Tonight), on Sept. 28. The remark was in response to a statement by Liberal Marcel Prud'homme (Montreal St-Denis) that Wagner who had been rejected by the Progressive Conservative party.

LaSalle was visibly surprised when a reporter told him the news. He had not yet seen the letter, which was delivered while he was taking part in the daily question period in the Commons.

Before being named to the Senate this spring, Wagner represented the riding of St-Hyacinthe in the Commons. He was first elected as a Conservative in 1972, and again in the 1974 general election.

During the last few years, the relationship between the two men has been stormy.

LaSalle supported Wagner unconditionally in his bid for the Conservative party leadership in February 1976.

When Wagner lost to Joe Clark, LaSalle declared he could not stay in the party. He later rallied to Clark's side.

During a byelection campaign in May, 1976, LaSalle accused Wagner of not working hard enough on behalf of the party's candidate.

'Strawberries In October'

Bennett Didn't Expect Anything

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he is not disappointed with the federal government's throne speech because he was not expecting anything new.

"The federal government, in a flurry of activity a few months ago, told us what their economic plans were," Bennett said.

Proposed cutbacks will have some impact on the federal-provincial agreements "but we in B.C. can financially withstand it," he said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Finding a job in Canada is like asking somebody to find strawberries in October, Social Credit MP said Thursday night.

Adrien Lambert (Bellechase) said in the Commons job hunting is similar to the case of a grown man being supported by his mother who says she won't feed him unless he finds strawberries in October.

Lambert, standing amid eight empty Social Credit seats in the Commons, was making his party's first contribution to the throne speech debate.

He was speaking in place of Charles-Arthur Gauthier of Roberval, Social Credit House leader, who Lambert said is home suffering from excessive fatigue.

Lambert said it is not true, as some say, that there are people who refuse to work.

Human Stupidity At Worst Blamed For Lack Of Jobs In Canada

He said you cannot find jobs that do not exist.

The unemployment rate in Quebec is higher than that national rate of slightly more than eight per cent.

He said the throne speech read at the opening of Parliament provide no cures for unemployment.

The MP said he was recently in Africa with a parliamentary delegation and was told by an official of Zaire that there was not enough paper to print school books and thus children were not receiving proper education.

Yet paper mills in Quebec were closing for lack of custom. This was "human stupidity at its worst." It showed that there was not the proper distribution of wealth in the world.

He also said the shipyards of Quebec, now having a difficult time, should receive more government orders.

LEVESQUE MUM ON CONFERENCE TOPIC

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Thursday he will make a statement outlining Quebec's constitutional position at the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa at the end of the month, but it is too early for him to say what position he will take.

"A lot can happen in two weeks," he told a news conference.

Asked what position Quebec would take at the meeting Oct. 30-Nov. 1, the premier said: "I'm asking myself that."

He recalled that at a meeting of the 10 premiers last August in Regina the consensus regarding constitutional changes proposed by Prime Minister Trudeau "was purely negative."

This Lady Publisher Likes a Low Profile

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — Nancy Marchand is a rare actress in that she doesn't want her part in a television series beefed up.

She plays Mrs. Pynchon, Lou Grant's boss-lady, in the CBS show, "Lou Grant", and declares, "I hope Mrs. Pynchon's role isn't increased, because I think she is a very dense character ... not dense in the head, but she could be too much of a good thing. Her presence seems to be felt whether she's on the screen or not."

Marchand, who got her training in the Buffalo, N.Y. Studio Theater School and at Carnegie Tech, worked for the American Theater Wing at the time when World War II was freshly over and returning G.I.'s made up the bulk of enrollment. She remembers the period as "a very exciting time. Suddenly America was filled with youngmen who'd had to grow up faster than they ordinarily would have.

"Thanks to veterans' benefits they suddenly had chances to do things they would never have thought of doing.

"They could become actors instead of farmers or drug store clerks in their home towns.

"So there was enormous excitement and experimentation in the Theater Wing."

Unfortunately Marchand can't remember that any of these young men with whom she worked went on to become major stars, though several stars of the future were involved in the program.

An alumna of the ill-received "Beacon Hill," Marchand still holds that the series was "unique." But she does't brood over its early demise, shrugging, "when you've been around for a while, if something goes down the drain, you just say, 'What the hell.' "

She's amused that, throughout the summer, TV viewers have claimed that the "Lou Grant" series was improving.

"People are coming to us and saying that the shows are so much tighter," she notes, "that the character delineation is much sharper.

"Well, the shows they're talking about are reruns, because we started doing reruns in April.

"I think 'Lou Grant' is a literate show.

"A lot of shows have pretty girls and fancy lighting, but you don't have to listen. You have to listen to our show.

"It has something to say."

As to the second season, Nancy makes only one complaint.

The little dog, Barney, her companion throughout the first season, has been absent from the set. And she blames this on Lassie!

"Barney is Lassie's friend," she explains, "and the owners aren't eager for Barney to come to us, because Lassie gets nervous without him."

When Marchand was a regular on "Another World," she used her own dog, Mugsy, in the series, to the pleasure of both.

"Mugsy loves to act," she says proudly.

An inveterate worker, Nancy claims, "I've never taken a vacation. I wish I could learn how to do that.

"I never take things calmly.

"When I began needle point, I didn't make a glasses case or a coin purse. I made a nine by 12-foot rug."

Julie Andrews, who starred in "Hawaii" and who was there recently for the invitational premiere of her husband's "The Revenge of the Pink Panther," goes back again in October to star in "10," a film to be produced and directed by her husband, Blake Edwards, from his original screen play for Orion Picture Co.

George Segal will co-star.

For his current assignment, the title role in "The Magician," Alan Arkin is being coached by the famous German magician, Ted Lesley, who has researched tricks for the film which haven't been performed in 100 years.

The movie, which went into production Aug. 31, is being shot during a 10-week schedule in West Berlin and Eastern Europe with a cast including Arkin, Louise Fletcher, Valerie Perrine and Shelley Winters.

The picture tells the story of a gifted Jewish magician who lives his life both literally and figuratively on a tightrope, juggling women and jeopardizing his career as he dreams of being able to fly.

Arkin's flying sequences will be supervised by the European kite-flying champ, Wim Wachenaar, known as "The Flying Dutchman."

Bruce Jenner, the 1976 Olmpic decathlon champion, says he hopes his first baby, expected son, will be a girl, but that he'll cheerfully take whatever. He and wife, Chrystie, will name a daughter Carlynne, will name a daughter Carlynne; a son, Burt, for Bruce's brother who was killed in an automobile accident.

26th Season For Games

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS meet the New York Islanders in the National Network game when Hockey Night in Canada returns for the 26th season on CBC television. An enduring Saturday night Canadian sports highlight, Hockey Night in Canada airs on Channels 2 and 6 beginning Saturday, October 14th at 5 p.m.

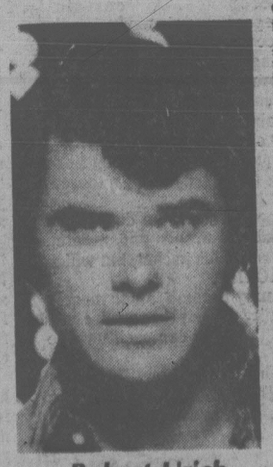
Tanna Happy with Vega$

Without question, one of the most exciting cities in the world is Las Vegas, Nevada. It might be situated in the middle of a desert, but one would never know it from the sights and sounds of the glittering casinos and dazzling showplaces. It was only a matter of time before a television series used the glamor spot is the premise of the CTV entry "Vega$."

It might be more accurate to call Las Vegas a legitimate co-star of the weekly action than merely a setting for it. The lead charater, Dan Tanna (Robert Urich), would probably agree with that. He's a former cop turned private investigator, with an uncanny knowledge of the crimes and criminals that work the city ... especialy when the sun goes down.

Tanna is the prototype of the detective-hero. Sauve, clean-cut appealing to women, courageous, bright — all the qualities one would expect a private eye to have. Since Tanna operates out of Las Vegas, the excitement is twice as great.

Though he can be very self-reliant, Tanna doesn't work completely alone. In the grand tradition of investigators, he has a Girl Friday named Beatrice (Phyllis Davis) as well as a slightly daft but very attractive part-time secretary (Judy Landers). At times, he uses a reformed hood named Binzer (Bart Braverman) on cases that don't involve an enormous amount of risk. Last but far from least is Bernie Roth (Tony Curtis), an enormously wealthy hotel owner and a client of Tanna's. A shifty character himself, Roth Keeps Dan on retainer for special investigating jobs ... such as finding out who occasionally rigs the slot machines in the lobby.



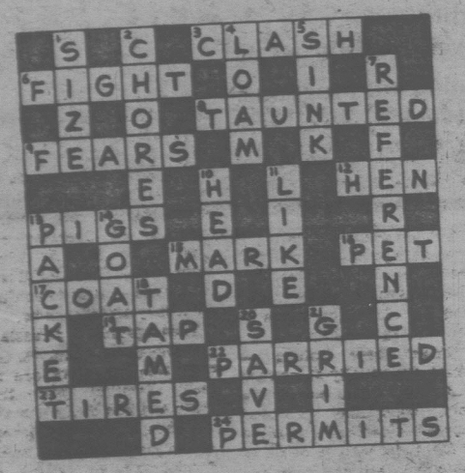
Robert Urich

Robert Urich has had a good deal of acting exposure since the 1970s began. He has appeared in four television series not counting his new role. His first part was in the TV version of the hit movie "Bob And Carol And Ted And Alice." He also co-starred opposite Clint Eastwood in the movie "Magnum Force." After that, he was signed by producer Aaron Spelling to co-star in the series "S.W.A.T." in wich he played a policeman. In one episode of that show, he appeared with his wife, actress Heather Menzies.

Just last year, Urich appeared in two different programs running at the same time. In the popular CTV hit "Soap," he played tennis pro Peter Campbell. His "death" in the storyline sparked an outrageous investigation and trial, which had viewers literally hanging for the solution all summer long. He was also appearing as a comically egostical television talk show host on the show "Tabitha."

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

3. CLASH not flash. There may not be enough light to make the swords flash. CLASH is firmly apt. Slash not favored.
6. FIGHT not light. The clue implies that this is a difficult thing to do anyway (since wind can "add to" that difficulty). However, it is usually easy to light a fire.
9. FEARS not tears. While FEARS are with us almost constantly, tears are a far rarer emotional response.
13. PIGS not pugs. The clue's assurance that "it is possible" refers to unlikely animals (e.g., PIGS), rather then to dogs (e.g., pugs) which are ordinarily pets.
15. MARK not mask. Why specify a mask "seen," as if a mask on the face could possibly not be seen? In any case, the idea of remembering it afterwards is more significant in the case of a facial MARK (of indentification).
16. PET not bet or jet. Aptly, the loss (death) of a real PET is apt to strike one with a feeling of personal tragedy (which may need to be kept in realistic persepctive). A jet plane is only a machine, the loss of which, in itself, hardly relates to the question of tragedy; if it's a question of human lives lost in a jet, one hardly can take it "too tradically." Bet is a trivial answer.
17. COAT not chat. The clue's concern with physical location links up more practically with coat than chat.
23. TIRES not tiles. The clue's concern with physical strength, or lack of it, links up with TIRES better than with tiles.

CLUES DOWN:

1. SIZE not site. There is a good bit of leeway for a buyer in the location or site of a house. A certain SIZED family, however, needs a house of a definite SIZE.
2. CHORES not chorus. The clue refers to a case of a human not fulfilling a duty, but a girl has no duty to stay in the chorus.
4. LOAM not load. "Load" is too vague. There is no evident reason to assume a load to be of a substance that necessarily can become practicaly heavier when wet. LOAM can be "heavier" (to dig, etc.) when wet.
7. REFERENCE not deference. A "certain" REFERENCE (i.e., a respectful one) may "show" a proper respect. Deference simply is respect.
10. HEAD not lead. A distinguished party HEAD can certainly be "very impressive," but one may be skeptical about the impressiveness or importance of a lead which is, presumably, merely an assessment of the present popularity of the parties.
11. LIKE not hike. Since people who LIKE to keep fit do so in many different ways (including hiking), there is little point in specifying "hike."
13. PACKET not pocket. A person's private documents would include formal deeds, insurance papers, etc., which he would hardly carry in his pocket, but which might be done up in a PACKET.
18. TAMED not tamer. They may become tamer merely by the accustomed proximity of man (in parks, etc.), but it is only by "efforts" that they can positively be TAMED.
20. SAVE not have. That which is said to "pay" a man is a positive act of shrewdness, foresight, etc., such as toSAVE something rather than merely to have it as an accomplished fact.

Soap Opera Scene

"They Know My Name!"

By John N. Goudas and Steven H. Scheuer

Days of Our Lives handsome newcomer Stephen Schnetzer, who plays Julie's long lost brother, Steve, was at L.A. International Airport recently, ticketed for a night flight to Boston to see his family, when a pair of cops closed in.

"They know my name!" Inside the actor's head panic flowed. "I don't have 25 grams of anything," he answered, misunderstanding.

The cops laughed. On night duty, one had watched "Days" with his wife that afternoon, and had seen Julie give her brother 25 grand for a trip to buy antiques in Paris.

On the flight back to L.A., another fan started a conversation with Steve, saying, "My wife wants to know what you're going to do with the $25,000."

An actor for seven years on the boards, yet unknown to the public, Stephen Schnetzer suddenly becomes a familiar face after barely three months on Days of Our Lives. Oh, the power of the tube!

Curly haired, almost too handsome Stephen Schnetzer is part of Days of Our Lives new look with the accent on youth. TV sister Julie (Susan Seaforth Hayes) finally found her wandering brother Steve in Paris this summer, and happily brought him back home.

Wasting no time, brother Steve is seen filching money from the till of Doug's Place, and never says a word when others are blamed. Currently in business with his sister Julie, Steve asks for 25 grand to buy items in Paris for the new store, and Sis hands it over without a question. Imagine having a sister who gives you 25 thou just like that. It can only happen in soap opera.

"I'm not all bad," newcomer Stephen observes. "I feel like I'm straddling a fence. I'm a rat at times, then I help Theresa with her drinking problem."

But his villainy is established, and it's sorely needed. As for being a ladies man, Steve is limited by the paucity of eligible women on the show. He displayed interest in Mary Anderson but she's in love with Chris, and Theresa has her eyes on Doug, and all the other ladies are married. So, the newcomer must bide his time.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Rebecca Hollen joined the "As the World Turns" cast recently in the role of Tina Cornell, the other woman in the Nick and Valerie Conway triangle. Rebecca was a fashion model and soap fans might remember her as Dolly in "One Life to Live" . . . Don Stewart (Mike Bauer in "Guiding Light") is really getting a lot of use from his new plane. Don can take concert and benefit dates at a moment's notice since he uses his own deluxe form of transportation . . . Say goodbye to Kathy Glass as Jenny Vernon in "One Life to Live" and say hello to Brynn Thayer who took over the role . . . 11-year-old Jarrod Ross (he plays Phillip Spaulding in "Guiding Light") has a leading role in an upcoming Halloween TV special titled "Gorey Halloween." The young actor went on location in upstate New York where the bulk of the special was filmed at a local mansion which undoubtedly will double as a haunted house . . . ABC just can't do anything wrong this season, or so it seems. In addition to being number one in prime time, the network recently became number one in the soap opera department. All its five day dramas — "One Life to Live," "All My Children," "Ryan's Hope," "General Hospital" and "Edge of Night" — are number one in their respective time periods.

John Hearn's Collectibles

S. Phillips of Scarborough writes — I picked up this old ginger beer bottle at a garage sale for 50c. It is marked A. E. Burke, Brantford. Would this be a collector's item.

I would keep the location of that garage sale secret if I were you, Mr. Phillips; you should have no trouble in getting $50 for that bottle if you wanted to sell it.

Ginger beer bottles — which are usually stoneware — and glass pop bottles are very collectible provided they are clearly of Canadian origin and bear the name of some local bottler. There are thousands of reproduced stoneware bottles from England which are worth virtually nothing but home grown models are much sought after.

In Ontario the dean of pop bottle collectors is Jim Herr who lives at 175 Alma Street, St. Thomas, Ontario, and he has published the best of the buyers guides on the subject. There is one on ginger beer, one on soda water and another on breweries. They used to sell for $4.95 a couple of years ago and may still be in print. Each is a comprehensive guide in which each bottle is carefully drawn, described and priced. They only have to help you recognize one bargain at a garage sale to pay for themselves handsomely. I would be interested in knowing about anything similar published on the west coast.

If S. Phillips' bargain was not bad enough, lo and behold I have another letter from Mrs. S. Hayes of N. Vancouver, who says she picked up this nice little creamer at a church bazaar for 25c. It is in good condition, decorated with unidentified flowers and marked R. S. Prussia. She wants to know where she might find the sugar bowl to go with it.

I don't know what your chances are of finding a matching sugar bowl but I do know that it could easily cost you $150. or more.

Picking up an R. S. Prussia creamer at a church bazaar for 25c is, I suspect, much less of a fairy tale than it appears. You have to get up early in the morning to beat the dealers or their pickers; they are skimming around the lawn sales almost before the stuff is on the table and a very quick glance tells them whether it is worth staying or not. This is where experience pays off. Snatching off the bargains is not a piece of underhand villainy, it is the reward for years of study which go into the development of an unerring eye. They do not have to turn a piece over to find out if it is R. S. Prussia — only to confirm what they already know.

Then again R. S. Prussia is too obvious an example. Garage sale operators are already familiar with that name and less likely to make mistakes. There are dozens of far more obscure brands which they might well put out on the 25c table sending some picker home rejoicing. Teplitz, Rudolstadt, Maastricht, Buffalo Pottery to mention just a few. I have frequently made rude remarks about the accuracy of price guides but I don't see how you can do well at sales without one. There are a couple of comprehensive American guides — Warmans and the Kovels — both obtainable from bookstores for around $16.; they list tens of thousands of antiques and price them well enough to show up lawn sale bargains. You only have to be careful if an item is trading anywhere near the price they mention.

Their main value, however is not in the prices themselves but as a check list of what is considered valuable. Sales buffs should always carry one in their glove compartment.

W.E.B. Series' Pamela Bellwood

Pamela Bellwood Rules Network

By DAN LEWIS

Two years ago, the movie, "Network," which brutally satirized the television industry, walked away with most of the Academy Awards. This season, NBC has "W.E.B.," which its creators and stars contend will set the record straight about networks.

The Thursday night series should, conceivably, come closer to the realities of network machinations since it was created by Lin Bolen, herself a top programming executive at NBC before she opted to become an independent producer.

Miss Bolen was one of the first women to rise to a top network executive post in programming. At her departure, she was vice president of daytime TV at NBC, a hard-driving savvy programmer who is often rumored to have been the model for the Oscar-winning role Faye Dunaway played in Paddy Chayefsky's biting "Network."

In "W.E.B." (the initials have no literal meaning, simply a by-play on the oftenused trade sobriquet for network, "web"), the principal character is Ellen Cunningham, an ambitious, uncompromising TV executive of a mythical network. She is played by Pamela Bellwood, an auburn-haired, attractive, award-winning Broadway actress making her debut as a regular in a video series.

The movie was based on extreme satire. This is a realistic network.

Despite an award-winning performance on Broadway (she won the coveted Derwent Award for "Butterflies Are Free"), and a number of other critical successes on Broadway, and television, she is unaccustomed to attention.

"This is only my second press interview," she told a group of television columnists recently. "The first one was a half-hour earlier, next door."

She relishes the role of Ellen Cunningham, the challenging, liberated young woman climbing up the executive hierarchy in a field dominated by males.

"I'm usually cast as an icy, intelligent woman, a real bitch of a person," she notes. Then she adds, however, that she doesn't believe she's been type-cast in those roles "because I'm still anonymous."

She's also pleased that the show's intentions are not to create any imbalance in the rivalry among the sexes.

"I would not like to see all men portrayed as being bad, or denigrated," she declares, "or all women made superheroes."

Co-starring in "W.E.B." are Alex Cord as head of prime-time programming of the mythical network (Trans-American Broadcasting), Richard Basehart as head of news, Andrew Prine, head of network sales, and Steve McNally as chief of the network.

Diane Stapley Joins The Beachcombers

Diane Stapley, well-known to television and theatre audiences across Canada, joins CBC's most popular family series The Beachcombers on Sunday October 22 at 7 p.m.

Joining series star Bruno Gerussi (logsalvager Nick Adonidis) and the gang at Molly's Reach, Stapley will portray a new member of Gibson's RCMP detachment, Constable Samantha Jones. Making the first of four Beachcombers appearances, she is introduced in the episode titled Constable Sam Jones.

No sooner has Constable Jones joined the RCMP unit at Gibson's than she's up to her epaulettes in mystery when someone steals a two-ton statue from the town square. Spurred on by a spark of romance, Nick helps Sam find the culprits, but not before she suspects him and Nick is forced to spend some uncomfortable time behind bars.

Stapley, well-suited to her new role, has two ACTRA Awards for her work as a variety performer on Inside Canada, 1974 and The Diane Stapley Show, 1977. She made her first professional appearance in Annie Get Your Gun during the fifties, and chose the stage over her only other serious ambition - to be a policewoman!

Good friends, Stapley and Gerussi first worked together in the tremendously successful Toronto production of The Fantastiks and Stapley has been a guest on Gerussi's Celebrity Cooks.

Looking at Stars

Bridges 'Loving Pop'

Valerie Harper

Danny Kaye

Lloyd Bridges

Nice man, that Lloyd Bridges. In a recent interview, he was so gung-ho about the fine acting of his Jeff Bridges with Farrah Fawcett-Majors in their current theatrical release, "Somebody Killed Her Husband," that it took some minutes to get into the subject of "World War II: GI Diary," the syndicated series he is narrating.

And that proves what a loving pop he is. Soft-spoken and genial Lloyd is an habitual perfectionist who steeps himself in the lore of every role, and every job, he takes on.

As it turns out, of course, the current series is no exception. "The episodes themselves, the actual films, really give me all the background I need . . . but yes, I did hit the books, too. Time-Life is producing this, you know, and they loaded me down with reading material. They've been absolutely wonderful."

So wonderful, in fact, that when other interests brought Lloyd to New York from California this week, the producers relocated the taping operation to the Big Apple as an accommodation. Lloyd still has nine of the 25 programs to do. The series draws on actual combat footage and pairs it with the recollections of veterans.

Comments Lloyd: "It makes me hope all the more that the Mid-East Summit peace talks work. There has to be a better way than war to solve conflicts."

Danny Kaye is donating his guest-star wages from Bob Hope's Oct. 15th, NBC special to UNICEF . . . the children's cause to which Kaye gives so lavishly of his talent and time and heart . . . as well as money. In his capacity as ambassador-at-large for the United Nations International Children's Fund, Kaye pilots his own jet and picks up the tab himself.

Well, well. A comparative newcomer. Debra Feuer, has been cast as Daisy Mae in the TV adaptation of the musical, "Li'l Abner," being planned by NBC. Her Dad, pianist Ron Feuer, is Paul Anka's accompanist.

Of all the Daisy Maes to date, Wynne Miller's fragile blonde beauty most closely evoked the comic strip image created by Al Capp. Wynne, who is also from a musical family (and how! her uncle was the late Glen Miller), made her Broadway debut in the role when Edie Adams left. Wynne, who kept up vocal coaching even during the several years she acted on the now-defunct soap, "Somerset," has progressed to billing as a mezzo-soprano whose forte is the concert stage.

Dick Cavett and his actress wife Carrie Nye have said it's their policy not to appear together on television. But this fall, they will at least be on the same network. Dick is continuing the second season of his interview series on PBS, and Carrie is one of the panelists on "We Interrupt This Week," public television's first-ever game show.

Their feet and muscles must be aching, but you won't hear one squawk from any one of "The world's greatest precision dancers," the Radio City Music Hall Rockettes, because of the hours, in fact days, of extra rehearsals for NBC's Dec. 14th tribute to Manhattan's liveliest landmark.

Stepping from the line of high kickers to speak for all of them was Barbara Ann Citadino, brunette, pretty and a shade shy. "The special was a godsend . . . because otherwise we would have been idle for seven weeks. But it's been a challenge, too. Television has different requirements. We're used to going right through a thing. For the cameras we keep stopping and starting again. Our biggest worry, though, was unnecessary. We were scared to be working with a superstar like Ann-Margret, but she blended right in and made us all feel comfortable."

It was, by the way, a learning experience for A-M, too. Seeing the Rockettes as a youngster inspired her to study dancing. But she made the leap from school to featured dancer without ever working a chorus line. "That is, she's led chorus lines, but never had to follow until now" (for a scene to two, that is, before the spotlight singles her out).

One Radio City grad, buy the way, who did go on to stardom isn't in the special. She's Valerie Harper ("Rhoda") who for three years was a member of the hall's companion dancing group, the Corps de Ballet.

Monty Hall isn't saying he'll never do television again, but since he has no little screen deals in the offing at the moment he's taking the stock company route to polish up his song-and-dance-man skills. Right now he's touring in the role originated by Phil Silvers in "High Button Shoes." After that, he'll take a new whack at supper clubs. When Monty first appeared in Vegas a few years back he said he kept asking himself, "Why am I here? I'm not a night person . . . I'm a day person." But he was still committed to TV tapings of "Let's Make a Deal," his kids — now grown — were still little and his lovely strawberry blonde wife Marilyn had to stick close to the hearth. Now she can travel with him . . . so maybe the time is ripe to put some mileage on his tap shoes.

Two who were big stars when movies were magic, Joan Bennett and Lew Ayers, have roles in "A Time for Love," which Ross Hunter is producing as an NBC mini-series.

Another Goodman Drama School alunmus heads home in triumph to Chicago. he's that big teddy, Avery Schreiber, who, after finishing his 40th commercial as the mad (Doritos) cruncher, will star for two weeks at the Pheasant Run Theater in "Romanoff and Juliet."

Avery has a big dulcet voice hidden under the monosyllabic grunt he uses for his corn chip bit (or is it bite)? Whatever, when he did a phone-in interview show before flying out of Manhattan, six women callers squealed surprise and called him sexy.

He had misgivings about the role at first, but it's all better now. His explanation: "You see Peter Ustinov wrote the role for himself and to do justice to it, I felt I needed to study more than the play. I had to read up on Ustinov and see as much of him on film as I could."

And speaking of Peter Ustinov, the sometimes author is taking a whirl at acting again this season. He's been shuttling between England and Spain filming a TV adaption of "The Thief of Baghdad," due on NBC in the fall.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. First it was Farrah Fawcett-Majors and now I hear Kate Jackson wants out of "Charlie's Angles." You would think Miss Jackson and the other Angels would be happy with such a popular show, not to mention all the attention they receive from the public and their fans. What gives? — B.N. San Mateo, Calif.

A. Well, things are jumping on the set of "Charlie's Angels." Although no one can be sure until next year's television lineup, it appears this may be the last season for the highly rated show.

Kate Jackson is in the last year of her contract for the show. For some time now, she has expressed concern over stories that feature the good looks of the three Angels rather than their individual acting abilities. She reportedly is not overly unhappy but obviously does't want to be remembered by television fans as one of the "beautiful" Angels. Jackson considers herself a serious actress who happens to be good looking. Because of this dissatisfaction, ABC recently disclosed that Jackson will do another series for the network when her current hit show ends.

ABC also announced that Cheryl Ladd will star in a new series for the network after "Charlie Angels" finishes its run. Presumably, ABC is talking about the end of the current season.

Q. I'm a great fan of "Quincy" but for the life of me, I can't remember the good doctor's first name. All his colleagues refer to him simply as Quincy. How about some help? — J.E. East Brunswick, N.J.

A. You're out of luck. Producers of the weekly series never gave Quincy a first name and writers of the show never developed one in case someone asked. He's just plain Quincy.

Q. Is Dennis Dugan, who plays the lead role in "Rickie Brockelman, Private Detective," related to acter Andrew Dugan? — J.P. Chapsville, Penn.

A. They are not related.

Question of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Revue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

The most interesting thing about Felicity Cochrane's bumptious biography of Margaret Trudeau, Margaret Trudeau: The Prime Minister's Runaway Wife, is its 22 missing pages. They have disappeared from somewhere in the middle of Chapter 10, following Cochrane's description of the Liberals' 1974 election campaign.

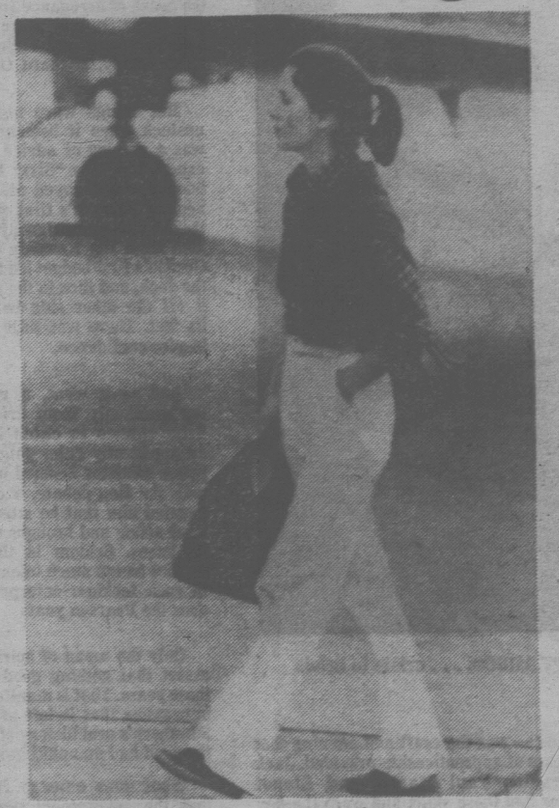
That was the campaign which many people believe Margaret won for the Liberals single-handed, against all the strategists' advice. A week before election day, Time magazine commented: "She has become the freshest, most appealing person in the compaign . . . she has become a politician in her own right. In a close election, her drawing power conceivably could make the difference between victory and defeat for the Liberal Party."

Two months later Margaret was in hospital, reportedly suffering from "severe depression." Cochrane's book would have told us why, if her publishers' lawyers hadn't seen fit to censor 22 pages of her manuscript. They also removed three paragraphs quoted from an editorial which had already appeared in print, in an Ontario weekly newspaper called the Vaughan Vanguard.

With a pinch of generosity that borders on the diabolical, the lawyers did allow this titillating excerpt from the Vanguard editorial to stand: "Trudeau late in 1973 built a swanky bachelor pad on the top floor of the official residence at 24 Sussex Drive. After the 1974 election a big bash was held at the upstairs playpen, which shocked Maggie to such a degree that she took off for Paris, France. She was located there by the then Ambassador to France, Leo Cadieux, and wisked (sic) off to Montreal Neurological Institute, where she hysterically spilled the beans, but good. After the story of Margaret's whereabouts broke in the press, Trudeau rushed to the Institute and pictures of Pierre and Margaret strolling through the sanitorium's grounds were released."

End of quote. Also end of "the real story behind the hottest headlines of the decade", as promised on the book's cover. Oh well. People who read books like Margaret Trudeau, The Prime Minister's Runaway Wife deserve such a fate.

Its author, by the way, is a real person. After the hatchet job she does on Pierre Trudeau I began to wonder if "Felicity Cochrane" were a pseudonym for a clutch of Conservatives out to "get" the P.M. Cochrane is British-born, a former BOAC air hostess, publicist, CBC interviewer (she once did a series of radio interviews with celebrities who passed through Gander, Newfoundland, on their way to connecting planes), journalist and writer. (Her first book was Behold, I Am a Woman, about Canada's first sex-change operation.) In 1965 she was an unsuccessful Tory candidate in the Toronto riding of Parkdale. Her future plans, it seems fair to add, are anybody's guess.



MARGARET . . . some missing pages

Cochrane's publishers report that, Margaret Trudeau is into its fourth printing in six weeks and has sold 100,000 copies in Canada. In the U.S. the figure is closer to 70,000. Cochrane thoughtfully provides brief explanations of Canada's parliamentary system wherever her U.S. — or Canadian, for that matter — readers might be in danger of losing the drift; and seldom forgets to set a thorough scene. (Sample: "Perched on a cliff above the Ottawa River, overlooking an inlet where Indians and explorers portaged to the Rideau River, (24 Sussex Drive) enjoys superb views to both the north and west." We also learn how much Simon Fraser University cost to build and who discovered Vancouver.)

Although Cochrane is no slouch at outright disparagement, her preferred technique on the subject of Trudeau is tarring by association. Unrelated paragraphs are juxtaposed to create misleading impressions while remaining within the laws of libel. It is a dirty tactic, not often seen in Canada. Is Cochrane's justification contained in those 22 missing pages? All we can know for sure is her final verdict after weeks of research: "I personally am . . . inclined to label (Margaret) a deeply hurt young woman who was used for political gain by her power-hungry husband."

Meanwhile, far from the home front, the Trudeau government has a new thorn in its side. The 1812 Committee ("so named because we intend to win") comprises 31 major cultural organizations which have begun organizing to protest federal spending cuts in the arts field. They plan to pressure candidates in upcoming by-elections, lobby MP's, conduct a letter-writing campaign, and stage a "National Day of Action" on October 26. Country-wide participation is urgently invited. If you're interested, write the Association of Canadian Publishers, 70 The Esplanade, Third Floor, Toronto M5E 1R2.

Saving the Whales . . . and People Too

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

When the members of the first Greenpeace expedition sailed north on their abortive mission to halt the Amchitka nuclear test, they stopped at an abandoned whaling station at Akutan Bay in the Aleutian Islands. The sight of the whales' bleached bones on the shore there stirred in the Phyllis Cormack's crew "a sense that some major point had been missed, that incalculable damage had already been done, and that we were . . . too late."

"Suddenly," Robert Hunter writes, " . . . it was not enough to shield human beings from their own folly. We would have to shield the nonhumans too, or without them there would be a . . . deterioration of the great system of order underlying the whole flow of life on the planet."

That, briefly, is the premise and belief behind the actions of every eco-guerrilla on this beautiful planet: we are bound inextricably in a whole with every creature that shares this space, and that to do damage to one is to do damage to all. To Save a Whale might well be entitled To Save a Human.

To save a whale, of course, requires human risk — what meaningful action doesn't? — and Hunter's matter-of-fact account of the Phyllis Cormack's, and later the converted mine sweeper the James Bay's, encounters with the Russian whaling fleet in the Pacific manages to subtly convey at least a portion of the tension, excitement and exhilaration coursing through the veins of Greenpeace's polyglot crews.

Whether the whalers ever actively threatened Greenpeace is a moot point; just being there in an inflatable boat on the Pacific swells in closing fog chasing a killer boat exposed these adventurers to more risk than the rest of us can imagine.

Greenpeace's mission wasn't all heroics, of course: what mission in our bureaucratized, financed world is?

The story of how such a radical organization as Greenpeace managed to get started, survive and grow in such a heavily (albeit subtly) repressive society such as ours — a rereading of Marcuse would, one suspects, be useful here — has yet to be written, but Robert Hunter has managed to convey with a minimum of sentiment the powerful and true foundation and actions of a unique collection of people.

The photographs included in this volume are nothing short of glorious.

A struggle to communicate by radio with Vancouver; some crew members of the James Bay; a healing session with a friend, to name only three — each scene is captured in clear black and white that lends a dimension to the story that words alone can't provide.

And as Rex Wyler, the photographer, remarks in a postscript to this book, "It was the magnetism of whale consciousness that carried us . . . so far beyond ourselves, and whale magic alone that kept us afloat through this stormy story . . . "

A Nice Guy Who Flopped as Politician

By WALTER YOUNG

The Pearson years were not among the finest chapters in the history of the Liberal party. A succession of minority governments did not help matters and the baleful presence of John Diefenbaker on the benches opposite as either prime minister or leader of the opposition was no asset. The principal difficulty, however, was the party leader.

A nice guy, successful diplomat and well versed in the arcana of professional sport, he was not a politician and not particularly successful as a manager of men. He got to be leader of the party because he was an Anglo-Saxon Protestant and because he won the Nobel Peace Prize. Had he not been a Nobel Laureate, Walter Harris would probably have beaten him. The party tradition of alternation between Francophone-Anglophone, Protestant-Catholic served to erode Paul Martin's chances so much that his opposition to Pearson at the convention was largely token.

From the beginning Pearson was the genial and cooperative vessel into which the men around him poured their ideas, enthusiasm and political skills. Fortunately for Pearson — and for Canada — they were, for the most part, selfless men of some talent and dedication. Pearson's campaign for the party leadership, for example, was run by Walter Gordon, Keith Davey and Maurice Lamontagne, typically at Gordon's invitation.

Once in office as leader of the party and leader of the opposition, life was more difficult, for the men around the leader were less cohesive. On the one side was the Toronto group that brought to Ottawa the new politics of polls, PR men and slick advertising. What they did not bring — could not bring — was the craft and cunning that only years of apprenticeship provided. Jack Pickersgill, Paul Martin and Lionel Chevrier had those skills and were the key figures around Pearson from the old guard. Their wisdom, however, was relied on less than was wise, but understandably so since they were all irremediably tarred with the brush of arrogance from the C. D. Howe era. Pearson was more comfortable with breezy, young and enthusiastic men like Keith Davey, Richard O'Hagen, and Tom Kent.

But things were not long in coming unstuck when it became clear that there was a surplus of advice and a scarcity of experience. The "Sixty Days of Decision" hung like a decayed albatross around the neck of Pearson's first government, placed there by his campaign advisers, who got the idea from the Kennedy campaign. Walter Gordon's first budget led the government off the dock, and then in the chaotic retreat led it off the other side before it could find its feet. There was little in the 60 days to inspire confidence.

And so it went, a government lurching drunkenly from crisis to crisis with little chance to catch its breath. When an apparently calm patch did appear, the prime minister insisted on splashing about with the flag debate, a debate that so exhausted him that he stumbled into the Rivard affair and brought the government to its knees. Seldom in the history of our politics has so much talent been squandered in such feckless enterprise as took place over the Pearson years.

Only the mean of spirit however, would assert that nothing good ever come from those years. That is manifestly false. But the impression that is left after reading Peter Stursberg's oral history of the period is that the good had an uphill battle to survive.

What does emerge from the book is that the government desperately wanted someone to pull things together and that Lester Pearson, whatever else he was, was not that someone. He could head a delegation with undoubted skill, but he was not suited for the lonely heights. He needed too much the diplomat's phalanx of advisers at his elbow.

The technique of interviewing the principal actors around an historical period is now well established. Stursberg does it better than most. He provides the context with admirable lucidity and lets the story tell itself through the statements of people like Paul Martin, Walter Gordon, Douglas Fisher, Tommy Douglas, Alvin Hamilton, to name only a few.

The disadvantages of the technique are several, chief of which is that it is highly selective both in gathering the information and in its presentation. The interviewer sets the stage by the kind of question asked, and rearranges the set still further when he edits the comments. Those interviewed obviously do some arranging themselves, especially so as politicians whose sense of their own place in history will color their recollections.

These caveats apart, Stursberg's book is an important adjunct to the Pearson Memoirs, especially since the third volume of the Memoirs is really incomplete and glosses over much, including the signal role played by people like Tom Kent and Keith Davey. Lester Pearson and the Dream of Unity is not the last word but certainly one of the more engrossing accounts of politics during the tenth decade of confederation.

Women SF Writers Can Stumble Too

By JULIAN REID

Not so long ago, the future was unabashedly a man's world — at least, as most science fiction authors were accustomed to portraying it.

Female readers were far outnumbered by their masculine counterparts; and as for the handful of women writers who had managed to infiltrate the genre, they seemed for the most part content with their role as purveyors of male-oriented power-fantasies, set in a male-dominated never-never land where women seldom if ever had the temerity to question their appointed place. True, there was the occasional foray into a sub-genre aptly characterized as "dials-and-diapers" SF; but for understandable reasons it never gained much of a following.

And then, in the 1960's, things began to change. A new wave of decidedly non-diaper-minded women writers came sweeping into the field, among them such now-respected figures as Joanna Russ, Kate Wilhelm and the brilliant Ursula K. LeGuin. Unlike their predecessors, they were very much concerned with imagining new roles for women as well as men, and with creating non-sexist images of possible futures that could serve as templates for various kinds of social change.

In recent years this ongoing feminization of the field has intensified, until today it is almost a commonplace to assert that all the best new SF writers are women. And one of the showcases for this contention has been the excellent series of anthologies edited by Pamela Sargent . . . Women of Wonder, More Women of Wonder, and now The New Women of Wonder — all devoted, as their recurrent subtitle puts it, to "Science Fiction Stories by Women About Women."

This latest entry contains a generous selection of 11 stories, including a half-dozen substantial novellettes and novellas, by some of the leading female writers to surface in the genre over the past decade. It may well be the best year in the series — indeed, one of the best SF anthologies of any kind that I've seen in some time.

Strongest of all, to my taste, is The Women Men Don't See, surely one of the most subtly devastating exposes of male chauvinism ever written. It's author is James Tiptree, Jr., until recently hailed as perhaps the ablest of the male newcomers to the field. Last year, however, to the embarrassment of such critics as Robert Silverberg, who had hailed Tiptree's writing as "ineluctably masculine," this author revealed "himself" to be yet another woman — a retired experimental psychologist named Alice Sheldon.

Tiptree-Sheldon's eagerly awaited first novel, Up the Walls of the World, is now out, and it proves to be simultaneously a vindication of her tremendous talents and a somewhat frustrating disappointment as well. The trouble is that it is almost excessively eventful, with rather too much to offer of too many good things.

Interweaving three closely connected subplots — one set in an uncomfortably convincing top-secret ESP-research project here on earth, one taking place on a marvellously imagined and wonderfully alien world called Tyree, and one involving a huge space-going "Evil Presence" which is distantly involved in the wholesale destruction of planets — Tiptree writes almost as if she were A. E. van Vogt reincarnated as Harlan Ellison. For all her rich characterization, intense compassion and concentrated emotional power, the overall effect is rather like going over Niagara Falls in a giant kaleidoscope. It is certainly an interesting and cumulatively impressive experience — but there were times when I found myself wishing that the high-keyed intensity if Tiptree's prose would let up for just a moment, and give way to something quieter and less breathlessly melodramatic.

Something, in fact, like Dreamsnake, the second novel by another of the most widely-hailed new women writers in the genre, Vonda N. McIntyre. Like its predecessor, The Exile Waiting, this tale is a gentle and finely crafted account of the adventures of a young woman on a devastated future earth — womanly in its way, but not the least bit effeminate, with no trace of diaper-rash anywhere in its pages. And like its predecessor, too, it is an uneven work, its flat patches redeemed by quietly sympathetic characterization and some memorably effective scenes — though this time, as befits a developing young writer, McIntyre's overall achievement is more of a level, and cumulatively more satisfying, than it was in her earlier book.

Dreamsnake is expanded from the author's much-reprinted novelette, "Of Mist, and Grass, and Sand," which earned her a Nebula in 1974. Like it, the book deals with a young itinerant healer named Snake and her three serpentine familiars: Mist, an albino cobra, Sand, a diamondback rattler, and Grass, the "dreamsnake" of the title, an offworld importation whose hallucinogenic venom has the mystic capacity to "give dreams and ease dying."

All in all, Dreamsnake is a very enjoyable book — its best sequences so effective they make me wish all the rest had been up to their level — but one that might have benefitted more than a little from a touch or two of Tiptree's high-keyed emotional intensity.

Alas, neither Tiptree not McIntyre is represented in Cassandra Rising, an anthology of 19 never-before-published short stories by women science-fictioneers that would certainly have benefitted from the inclusion of both of them.

True, editor Alice Laurance can be credited with ferreting out a handful of good contributions — notably Chelsea Quinn Yarbro's widly funny Space/Time Arabesque and SQ, a biting little satire on psychistric tyranny by the marvellous Ursula K. LeGuin. But take away the two other noteworthy entries, one by Katherine MacLean and one a posthumous collaboration between the late Miriam Allen de Ford and Juanita Coulson, and one is left with 15 ill-assorted contrivances which range downhill from the thoroughly mediocre to the unutterably awful, the outstanding entries in the latter category being two thoroughly misconceived abortions by Grania Davis and editor Laurance herself.

Still, perhaps it is salutary to see so many rising Cassandras falling flat on their literary faces — if only because it reminds us that the SF of the future is no more going to be a predominantly women's world than it is a man's one today. There are enough first-rate male newcomers (John Varley, Michael Bishop, and George R. R. Martin, to name but three) to make sure of that.

THE NEW WOMEN OF WONDER, edited by Pamela Sargent. Vintage. $2.50.

UP THE WALLS OF THE WORLD, by James Tiptree, Jr. Longman. $11.95.

DREAMSNAKE, by Vonda N. McIntyre. Thomas Allen. $8.95.

CASSANDRA RISING, edited by Alice Laurance. Doubleday. $9.95.

Tracking down Rattenbury story Took a lot of dogged detective work

Terry Reksten, whose biography of architect Francis Mawson Rattenbury I reviewed here last week, is an attractive, petite, pert brunette whose vivacity lends added charm and color to her eloquence, which is as evident in her speech as in her writing.

Married, with two young daughters, and co-restorer of an elderly Oak Bay home (a few blocks from Rattenbury's former residence — now Glenlyon School) she also finds time to serve on the Oak Bay Police Board and Victoria City Council's Heritage Advisory Committee. She has also run for a seat on Oak Bay Council, and will undoubtedly do so again now that she has got the Rattenbury book out of her hair.

I met this going concern after I had read and reviewed her book. Over the years I have known several professional writers who were going to "do" Rattenbury, but had faltered en route, and I was interested to discover how a young Oak Bay housewife had succeeded beyond my wildest expectations where experienced people had failed dismally.

The answer appears to be a mixture of enthusiasm, love of research, boundless energy, and a spirit that treats a hopeless situation as a spur to try harder.

As so often happens in writing, personal interests were the genesis of the project. Her concern over the preservation of heritage buildings led to the discovery that Rattenbury had designed some of the most important of them. Then, as an avid devourer of books in the Famous British Trials series, she came across the Rattenbury-Stoner case and the account of the murder trial — and "one day the penny dropped that the murder victim was the Rattenbury who had lived a few blocks from my home."

Grant from Council

Later, she was doing commentaries for short films about local heritage buildings, made and screened by a Victoria TV station. She and the cameraman wanted to do something more solid and they hit on the idea of doing a feature on Rattenbury. They both applied for grants from the Canada Council under the Explorations Program. The cameraman was turned down, but Terry was given a grant for research.

As she had already done considerable work in Victoria, she decided to use the money to go to England to research Rattenbury's early and last years. The motivation at this point, she told me, was a sense of responsibility to the Canada Council to produce something for the public, possibly a book.

To a writer, research can be boring or exciting, depending on how you regard it. If things are going well, fine, but constant setbacks make you want to throw in the towel — unless, of course, you're the dogged type who regards every setback as a challenge. Terry Reksten is the dogged type. If she hadn't been, there would not have been a book.

Most people, if they ever give the matter a moment's consideration, seem to think books write themselves. All one has to do, they reason, is read what others have written (and steal whole chunks of it), rummage around the archives for a few days, talk to one or two people, and make some notes. Type it all out, add a few photographs and — poof! there's the finished article in the bookstore window. Total elapsed time three or four months.

Well, I must admit many books appear to have been flung together in this casual fashion. But whenever you read a non-fiction book which holds your attention and reads easily, you can be certain that the author has slaved and sweated blood over it for a long, long time. The easier it is to read the harder it was to write.

Rattenbury, which reads extremely well, took three years to prepare and write. That it took so long was due partly to inexperience (this is the author's first book), but chiefly to the paucity of research material.

Victoria is Rattenbury country and you'd imagine research would be plain sailing. Not a bit of it. As no one had previously written anything about Rattenbury Terry found herself pioneering. True, there are plenty of his buildings to inspect, but they're mute. Had she been an architectural historian she could have gone into this aspect at length, and in detail, and a damned dull book that would have made.

But she knew enough to realize that Rattenbury wasn't an original architect anyway (he wasn't even Victoria's best — Sam Maclure was), so, wisely, she concentrated her attention on the man. And as precious little is known about the man, the self-imposed assignment was a tough one, so tough that a less determined person would have given up the struggle quite soon, as indeed many would-be Rattenbury biographers did.

Terry talked to many people, and one interview served as an introduction to the next, but the trouble was that everyone was one generation removed from those who had known Rattenbury and this hearsay material had to be cross-checked and confirmed to be of value. Often she would spend a whole day talking to someone and receive nothing usable, and if she didn't draw a complete blank hours of talk might only produce a single paragraph in the book.

How frustrating! But Terry didn't see it that way. "I regarded it as a detective story," she told me. "It was really exciting to follow a hunch and find you were right." There speaks the dedicated researcher.

Nothing daunted her, not even the almost complete lack of information about Rattenbury's first wife, Florrie, a bland reclusive person no one knew — except her two children, whose views about their badly-treated mother (Rattenbury threw her over for a younger woman) are naturally narrow and biased, and therefore suspect.

And with their "we're proud of him, but we hated him" attitude the children were of limited use to Terry because they had nothing valuable to say, nor had they a single document or letter relating to their father.

The fact that no one liked the arrogant, boastful, irascible Rattenbury didn't help either. Terry became tired of hearing the refrain, "Oh, he was a genius, an amazing man, but . . ." However, she plugged away, and when you read her book you'll be astonished at how much she managed to glean from these difficult talks.

TERRY REKSTEN . . . 'I felt like Philip Marlowe'

The Provincial Archives were helpful, but it was back numbers of the Colonist and Times which proved invaluable. For one thing, the quoted Rattenbury letters to editors tell us more about the man's personality and attitudes than anything else.

Eventually Terry and her husband went to England — first to Leeds and Bradford in Yorkshire, where Rattenbury was born, raised, and trained as an architect.

There, she met the same frustrations — buildings, but precious little personal data. Worrying about her two young daughters she had left in B.C., to say nothing of limited funds, lent urgency to her quest; she had to hustle and yet not miss anything.

From Yorkshire, the sleuth went to London where she gained new insights into the Old Bailey trial of Alma Rattenbury and her young lover, George Stoner, for the murder of Rattenbury. She also met the Daily Mirror man who had photographed Alma after her acquittal and before her suicide.

'Get out of town'

Then, on to Bournemouth where Rattenbury had gone after leaving B.C., and where he met his violent end. She was interviewed by the local paper and the article produced semi-threatening phone calls: "Get out of town." "You're not wanted here." "What are you doing stirring all this up?" She also received calls from people who said they would talk "if you'll come to such-and-such a pub at such-and-such a time."

"I felt a bit like Philip Marlowe," she says, Terry kept all these strange appointments — and learned practically nothing of value. However, undismayed by threats and dead-ends, she pressed on. She located Rattenbury's grave — where the sexton gave her the discouraging news that "someone from Vancouver" had inquired about Rattenbury only three days earlier. Was it another author, she wondered? Would all her hard work prove to be in vain?

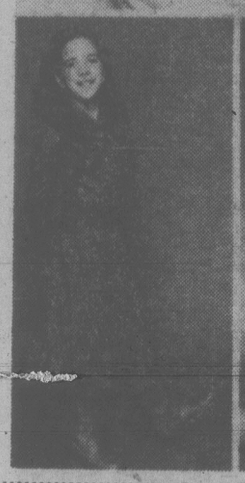
The scanty gleanings from many encounters formed a trail which eventually led to the murderer's house. After receiving no response to her knocking she ventured round the back and there, up a ladder mending a gutter, was the man who had killed Rattenbury in cold blood.

(Stoner had been sentenced to death, reprieved, and quietly freed seven years later in wartime Britain to work in an aircraft factory).

After some verbal fencing, he refused to cooperate, but by then he had inadvertently disclosed that he was the killer. Terry came away with some unpleasant impressions. "The thing that upset me," she says, "was that he had an unlined face . . . he reminded me of an elderly nun, unmarked by worry or care. He wasn't the type who would be terribly upset or remorseful."

The quest in England had proved somewhat abortive, but when she returned to Victoria Terry knew she had done all she could and that it was time to stop researching and start writing. One year, two drafts and a lot of sweat and tears later, the manuscript was typed, photographs assembled, and the search for a publisher begun.

In view of all her difficulties Terry had done a sterling job. The Rattenbury trail is cold. The man remains an enigma. Others, using the Reksten book as source material, may well develop the story by employing surmise, but no one is likely to produce a more factually absorbing biography. I wouldn't have missed it for anything.



High Fashion Is Her Style

Most young girls today uniformly dress in jeans and tee-shirts, but Quinn Cummings is the exception. She not only likes pretty clothes — she loves them. Quinn, who stars as Annje in the ABC Television Network series, "Family" (Thursdays, at 10 p.m. on Channels 4 and 8), thinks she might make fashion her career, perhaps as a fashion co-ordinator or designer. Quinn says she is glad high-fashion looks are finally available in little-girl sizes. For the record, she is a perfect size 10-Slim.

Troupe 'Too Intelligent'

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's Second City television troupe is holding a chaotic set of brainstorming sessions to write about 130 skits for its next 13-episode series following the world-wide success of its current series.

Producer Andrew Alexander set out for the United States with the current series on video cassette and was informed by Fred Silverman, former president of ABC network, that the troupe was far too intelligent for network distribution.

The writing room for the January series looks like something out of one of the troupe's sketches—a large, bare conference room, table piled high with styrofoam coffee cups and a notice board covered with various colors of three- by five-inch file cards.

The pink ones are funny ideas: The Foreigners—TV drama series, heavily ethnic; K-Tel Button Protectors—You know how you send your shirt to the laundry and the buttons come back chipped and worn.

ALREADY IN SCRIPTS

The white cards are funny ideas that already have been executed into scripts—UFO Sharkey; Movie of the Week: Hell Can Wait.

Segregated is another row of white cards—ideas that were executed but failed.

The current, 13-episode series, taped in July at Global Television Network in Toronto and being aired each week on Global, is a series of mini-indictments of TV.

In the largest U.S. cities, it is among the highest-rated, independently-syndicated show ever. And in some cities, Nashville, Tenn., for one, it is the highest.

It also is seen in Britain, Australia, the Philippines and Sweden.

"The notorious Swedish suicide rate has dropped since we penetrated there," jokes trouper Dave Thomas.

Ferries Boost Means 600 Jobs

The shipbuilding industry in B.C. has been given a long-term boost with the announcement Thursday of a $60 million ferry construction program.

Yarrows manager Don Challinor said the announcement could mean at least 600 jobs for Victoria.

Premier Bill Bennett, who is also the province's transport minister, said two new jumbo mainland-Vancouver Island ferries will be built and three existing Gulf Island vessels will be stretched.

Calling the project the largest ferry construction program in B.C. history, Bennett said it is the key to the government's strategy for maintaining a healthy shipbuilding industry in B.C. and providing jobs.

Challinor said Yarrows and its parent firm, Burrard Shipyard of Vancouver, are low bidders for the job of stretching the three small ferries.

The job likely will be evenly split between Victoria and Vancouver, meaning between 200 and 250 people would have to be hired here immediately.

"This could happen very soon, in a matter of two or three weeks," Challinor said.

If the company wins the contract for the two new jumbo ferries, one would have to be built in Victoria to meet the timetable. This would require an additional 400 workers, he said.

At the moment, Yarrows has 325 employees but this is being reduced to 150 in layoffs today and Monday as a result of the completion of a logging barge for MacMillan Bloedel.

Awarding the three stretch ferry contracts would bring the work force back up to about 400 and this could go over 800 if the new ferry is also awarded here.

"This announcement by the premier is very timely," Challinor said.

"Now our skilled people will know that jobs may be available for them very soon.

Canadian At Last

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — The Gang Ranch, a spread of nearly a million acres west of this Cariboo community, has become Canadian-owned for the first time in its 117-year history.

Canada's largest ranch in total land under its control has been bought for about $4 million by a family partnership headed by Dale Alsager of Ardrossan near Edmonton.

It last sold in 1948 for about $700,000, and has had three previous owners. The Alsager group bought the Gang from its American owners, Montana cattlemen Floyd Skelton and W. P. Studdert.

"We don't have any fancy plans for it although we do plan to increase forage production and have high priorities for range improvement and wildlife management," Alsager said Thursday.

Rattlesnake from attorney's mailbox

Bandleader's Son Seized In Snaking

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The 20-year-old son of bandleader Stan Kenton was arrested Thursday on suspicion of trying to kill an attorney, an enemy of the Synanon cult, by planting a 4½-foot-long rattlesnake in his home.

Kenton — reportedly a leader of the Synanon cult's paramilitary force called "The Imperial Marines" — and another Synanon member, Joseph Musico, 28, surrendered to police at a Synanon ranch in the Sierra near Badger, Calif., about 200 miles north of Los Angeles.

They were to be flown by helicopter to Los Angeles today.

Attorney Paul Morantz, 33, was reported in good condition by doctors who said he will probably be released from hospital this weekend.

Physicians said earlier he was "severely" poisoned by the rattler's strike and only the swift arrival of paramedics saved his life.

The snake, rattles removed to prevent it from sounding a warning, sank its fangs in Morantz's hand when he reached into his mailbox Tuesday.

Morantz, who won a $300,000 judgment against Synanon last month and has other legal actions pending, was one of several people across the United States, many of them in news work, who complained their lives were threatened after they annoyed the mysterious cult, founded as a drug rehabilitation group.

Pat Lynch, NBC-TV news producer, Thursday became the latest person to say she had been threatened by the group. After she produced a four-part story on the group which "got them very angry," she told reporters in New York, two men stopped her outside the studio and told her "the goal of Synanon is to get your life." She has been under surveillance since, she said.

The Los Angeles Times today quoted unidentified former Synanon members as saying Kenton belonged to a "protective force" within the cult known as "The Imperial

Day 3 Without Smoke

There were some desperate moments this week but all Times' newsroom participants in the quit smoking program were still nicotine-free today.

We're now in day three and we can admit it hasn't been easy for us to give up the weed.

And we're sure it has been just as difficult for all the folk who wrote in to declare publicly that they were quitting.

The big "I Quit" campaign is underway in conjunction with Dave Cotter's series on how to quit smoking which is appearing in the Times.

While three nicotine-and-tar-free days may not seem like much to non-smokers, for those with habits stretching out over 5, 10, 20 or more years it's quite a feat.

So all of you out there who've managed to tough it out this far, take a bow. As fellow quitters, we here at the Times know what you're going through.

This weekend coming up could, unless we're careful, prove the downfall for some of us.

Remember Cotter's advice to: Drink lots of water, go for walks, breathe deeply and try new things — foods included. Keep extra busy and don't think that since you've made it past three days, you've got the tobacco habit licked.

Because your mind can play tricks. It can make you believe that you're okay now, you've proved your point, and just one cigarette (cigar or pipe) couldn't possibly hurt. Well, if you want to blow the whole thing, just try it. You really know that when it comes to tobacco, you either use it or you don't, period.

Hang in there, and take it one day at a time.

See you all here Monday, for the next instalment of the I Quit program.

Ottawa Poised To Order CUPW Back to Work

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said today the government would "take very urgent steps" if a meeting between representatives of the government and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers failed to end walkouts by inside postal employees.

"There is a meeting going on at this time and we expect the government's representatives to meet with the postal union, CUPW, this afternoon," Trudeau told the House of Commons.

"We are hoping they will call off a strike which is premature in the sense that it was not called by the union executive," he said. "If they don't call the strike off the government will have to take very urgent steps indeed."

A spokesman for Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet, who offered late Thursday to intervene to bring the two sides back to the bargaining table, would lead the talks.

Montreal's 4,500 inside postal workers and several smaller locals of the 23,000-strong CUPW elsewhere in the country struck at midnight Thursday.

Marcel Perreault, head of the Montreal local, said the Montreal workers would not be forced to return to work.

"It's impossible without protection, it's impossible without a collective bargain, to stay in the Post Office," he said.

CUPW president Jean-Claude Parrot said in a Telex message to Pare Thursday he found it unacceptable that Pare had telephoned the union Wednesday, just days away from the threatened national strike, "to request an informal late-night chat."

The union leader said the post office had plenty of previous opportunities for chatting, but now the union wants serious negotiation. CUPW has been without a contract since June 30, 1977.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark figures it is more important to be electioneering than sitting in the Commons waiting for the postal back-to-work legislation.

When Clark demanded back-to-work legislation in the Commons, Trudeau challenged him to remain in his seat all day in case such legislation was introduced.

Meanwhile, the federal anti-inflation monitoring agency says the government's negotiated settlement with the Letter Carriers Union of Canada is too generous.

Robert Douglas, executive-director of the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity, told a news conference today that a "very rich cost-of-living clause" could give the letter carriers increases twice as high as the cost of living in the final six months of their 18-month contract.

"If the private sector and the rest of the public sector were to follow the pattern of this settlement . . . it would in our judgment be extremely difficult to bring down the rate of inflation in this country," Douglas said.

5-5 COMEBACK BY KORCHNOI

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi won the 31st game against chess champion Anatoly Karpov today, leaving the two players tied 5-5. The player who wins the next game takes the title and a record $350,000. The loser receives $200,000.

"I will keep on fighting," he said.

Even if Karpov should come back and win, Korchnoi has pulled off one of the great comebacks in the 13-match history of world championship chess.

Down five games to two in late August after a Karpov victory in the 27th game, Korchnoi won the 28th and 29th games. The 30th, with Karpov playing white, was drawn, and then Korchnoi pulled even with him today.

Asked his chance of winning the match after such a comeback, Korchnoi said, "It will be like a lottery."

Punctured Tanker Smears U.K. Coast

MILFORD HAVEN, Wales (AP) — A punctured Greek tanker that has leaked an oil slick 16 kilometres long and nine kilometres wide, endangering the picturesque South Wales coast, is "listing badly and in danger of sinking," a government official said today.

Remaining oil from 58,829-ton Christos Bitas was being pumped into a vessel alongside, the Esso York, in a bid to lighten and save the tanker, officials said. The ship's hull was pierced when it went aground on reefs near here Thursday while en route from Rotterdam to Belfast.

After almost a tenth of its 245,000 barrels of Iranian crude oil spilled into the sea, the crew managed to transfer oil into empty tanks and stop the leakage, the Welsh Office said.

"We think there is a 50-50 chance of saving the tanker if she can be lightened," said spokesman Elfed Bowen. "The sea is calm but visibility is poor."

Nineteen crew members were rescued from the listing craft today while 13 remained aboard to try to save the tanker. A ship from Rosslare, Ireland, was the first to answer the distress call from the Piraeus-registered vessel.

The coast guard said two other rescue boats were heading for the tanker. No casualties were reported after the ship ran aground off Skomer Island, 16 kilometres from this oil terminal port.

The government said the tanker ruptured three tanks when it hit the reefs. It floated free under its own power and was ordered to head 40 kilometres out to sea in a bid to prevent some of Britain's most beautiful coastline and a nearby wildlife sanctuary from being fouled by the leaking oil.

UVIC MEN OUTRAGED

A women-only dance being held tonight by the University of Victoria Womens Action Group (WAG) has raised cries of sexism on campus.

The dance will take place in the student union building and is open to all women, regardless of whether they belong to a feminist organization.

Men, however, are barred.

Outraged men complained to Alma Mater Society (AMS) president Dave Connell and student ombudsman Patty-Beatty Guenther as soon as posters advertising the social event appeared on campus.

Similar complaints were made to the UVic student newspaper, The Martlet.

Both Connell and Beatty-Guenter oppose the concept of women-only dances as discriminatory.

Connell said the AMS will not support any sort of racist or sexist activity and plans to take action against this sort of thing happening again on student property financed with student funds.

WAG is using the building rent-free and also received a $526 budget from the AMS

Funding for WAG's activities will be reviewed at budget time, Connell said.

He said the organization has done some good things, such as organizing campus day care facilities and has of potential.

Beatty-Guenter, a former WAG member, said she reluctantly resigned from the group this year over the dance issue.

She said WAG members believe dances barring men make it easier for women to relate to each other.

WAG members say its regarded as okay for men to go out together and have fun but it's frowned upon for women, she said.

No Strings on Lottery Profits

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Participating governments can spend profits from the Provincial and Express lotteries any old way they like. No questions asked.

Bill Weissmann, an official of the Western Canada Lottery Foundation said today in a telephone interview from Manitoba that although there is a "handshake agreement" among the four western provincies to use the funds for sports and recreation purposes, in reality each province has complete autonomy on how the funds are used.

And that includes, as in the case of the Socred government here, spending $100,000 in lottery cash to build a footbridge in the riding of a backbench Socred MLA.

It apparently doesn't mean a thing that the the B.C. Lotteries Act is quite specific on how the funds are used.

It states they are to be paid out for cultural or recreational purposes or for preserving the cultural heritage of the province or for any other purpose consistent with the objects of the Western Canada Lottery Foundation.

Asked if a footbridge is consistent with the objects of the lottery foundation, Weissmann said it's really none of the foundation's business to tell the provinces what to do.

He said the section of the act that mentions the foundation and its objects is "no longer applicable".

The foundation in effect works for the provinces, not the other way around, he said.

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) said the Socreds' use of lottery monies has turned them into a "political slush fund" for Social Credit MLAs who need help on getting re-elected.

Mrs. Dailly said the government's failure to budget for public need is forcing Social Credit backbenchers to beg money from the lottery fund for projects in their ridings.

"I am sure the footbridge is needed but there is something very peculiar about having to pay for it from the lottery fund which was set up to help the handicapped and aid amateur sport," she said.

Provincial secretary Grace McCarthy said the Socred government's policy is to broaden the field for the use of lottery funds on worthwhile projects.

The footbridge is a worthwhile project because Coquitlam municipality could not afford it and it didn't come under normal highways or public works expenditures, the minister said.

Another NDP spokesman expressed concern that other highways ministry projects will be paid for from lottery funds to hide overruns like the department's overexpenditure of $100 million last year.

Ferries Boost Means 600 Jobs

The shipbuilding industry in B.C. has been given a long-term boost with the announcement Thursday of a $60 million ferry construction program.

Yarrows manager Don Challinor said the announcement could mean at least 600 jobs for Victoria.

Premier Bill Bennett, who is also the province's transport minister, said two new jumbo mainland-Vancouver Island ferries will be built and three existing Gulf Island vessels will be stretched.

Calling the project the largest ferry construction program in B.C. history, Bennett said it is the key to the government's strategy for maintaining a healthy shipbuilding industry in B.C. and providing jobs.

Challinor said Yarrows and its parent firm, Burrard Shipyard of Vancouver, are low bidders for the job of stretching the three small ferries.

If the contract is awarded to Burrard-Yarrows, the job likely will be evenly split between Victoria and Vancouver, meaning between 200 and 250 people would have to be hired here immediately.

"This could happen very soon, in a matter of two or three weeks," Challinor said.

If the company wins the contract for the two new jumbo ferries, one would have to be built in Victoria to meet the timetable. This would require an additional 400 workers, he said.

At the moment, Yarrows has 325 employees but this is being reduced to 150 in layoffs today and Monday as a result of the completion of a logging barge for MacMillan Bloedel.

Winning the three stretch ferry contracts would bring the work force back up to about 400 and this could go over 800 if the new ferry is also awarded here.

"This announcement by the premier is very timely," Challinor said.

"Now our skilled people will know that jobs may be available for them very soon.

"It is also significant the premier has pledged to support the shipyards over the next two years. The jobs will be here."

Also bidding to construct the two new ferries will be Vancouver Shipyards, who earlier won the contract for the Queen of Alberni.

HANCOCK LEADING UNDER-25 PRO FIELD

NIMES, France (AP) — Phil Hancock of the United States took a two-stroke lead after the first round Thursday of the world golf championship for under-25 professionals.

Hancock fired a 66, six under par on the tough 6,720-yard Nimes course. Peter Barber of Britain had a 68. Sharing third place, with 71s, were Juan Anglada of Spain, Pat MacGowan of the U.S. and Gary Harvey of Britain.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby fired a 72 and shared sixth place over all with Noel Blenkarne of Britain.

Canada Runnerup In World Cup Test

PACIFIC HARBOUR, Fiji (Reuter) — Cathy Sherk of Fonthill, Ont., claimed the individual title in the women's world amateur golf championship today but her 294 total wasn't enough to lift Canada to the team trophy.

Australia won the Espirito Santo Trophy when Jane Lock produced a brilliant chip shot on the final hole.

To ensure Australia its first victory in the world amateur teams championship, Lock had to get down in two from the rough beneath a small tree about 60 yards from the green. She lofted a shot which landed on the front of the green and rolled to within three feet of the hole.

Lock played a magnificent last four holes to come from behind and deny the Canadians, who were led by Sherk's par 72.

Australia finished with 596 and Canada 597. France was third at 602 and Britain-Ireland and the United States were tied at 605. The best two scores of the three-woman teams counted in each day's team total.

Canada, with the United States and Britain-Ireland, had been six shots behind Australia at the start of the fourth and final round.

Under the competition rules, Canada and Australia would have been joint champions if there had been a tie. There would have been no play-off.

Canada made a great effort to pull the championship back from the Australians. Sherk's round was the only par round of the day in difficult, blustery conditions.

The Americans, who looked capable of making a strong challenge, faltered and the best two rounds they could produce were 78's.

Sherk had rounds of 72, 74, 76 and 72 for her 294 total that gave her a four-stroke edge in the individual standings. Next at 298 were Lock, M. Oda of Japan and Beth Daniel of the U.S.

Ten Straight Sub-Par Holes

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Tom Watson has the determined look of a man who's going to be the first to bank $400,000 in a single year just for knocking a little ball into a hole.

Thursday he battered Dale Hayes of South Africa to an 11 and 9 defeat in the first round of the World Match Play tournament on the Wentworth Club's 6,969-yard, par-73 course. It was the heaviest defeat handed out in the 15-year history of the tournament, it included 11 birdies and an eagle. Midway through the 36-hole match, Watson had shot 10 consecutive holes in nine-under par.

Watson said afterwards that those 10 holes—from the 15th in the morning round until the sixth in the afternoon—"were the best I've ever played."

If he wins the four-day tournament, Watson will collect another $60,000.

In today's second round, Australian Graham Marsh, the title-holder, was to play Britain's Nick Faldo, Spaniard Severiano Ballesters was to play New Zealander Simon Owen, Japan's Isao Aoki was to meet South African Gary Player. Watson was to go against American Ray Floyd.

Apart from Watson's brilliance, the day was a poor one for the Americans, with Watson and Floyd the only two from the United States to advance. Floyd beat PGA champion John Mahaffey 5-and-4, but U.S. Open champion Andy North, Andy Bean and Lee Elder all lost.

North went down 5-and-4 to Owen, the New Zealander who came a close second to Jack Nicklaus in the British Open last summer. Faldo, the 22-year-old British hope, beat Bean 5-and-4, while Isao Aoki of Japan beat Elder 5-and-3.

Gary Player, the Masters winner, who has won here five times—far more than anyone else—made a storming come-back after being four down against David Graham of Australia.

Player gradually chipped away at Graham's lead, squared the match at the 31st, then picked up two of the final four holes to win 2-and-1.

Marsh had a tough battle against Brian Waites, a British club professional, before winning 2-and-1.

N-War to Mark Pope's Reign?

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Roman Catholic prelate and former exorcist writing in the latest issue of the Vatican weekly Osservatore della Domenica says a worldwide disaster, possibly a nuclear war, might mark the reign of the new pope to be elected in the conclave starting Saturday.

Msgr. Corrado Balducci referred to the so-called Prophecies of St. Malachy, an ancient list of Latin mottos for each pope, and said an impending Third World War might be written under the motto for the next pope — De Labore Soli or Of The Fatigue of the Sun.

It is very unusual for a Vatican publication to grant even indirect support to any of the "prophecies," generally viewed as a 16th-century forgery under the name of the 12th-century Irish monk-archbishop St. Malachy.

"It could refer to a minor detail, such as something in the coat of arms of the new pope or some other irrelevant circumstance," Balducci said of the motto Of The Fatigue Of The Sun.

But he said some read into the motto "a more important meaning, referring to the time in which he (the new pope) will live. In this context, during the next pontificate, a great cataclysm will occur, which most likely could be the Third World War."

Balducci wrote this would be followed by "a period of peace and tranquility" under another pope. But as far as the cataclysm theory goes he said the so-called Secret of Fatima reported to have predicted "a great war" for the second half of our century too.

The Vatican never published the secret. But, Balducci wrote, a text printed in Italy and West Germany years ago "seems to be acceptable as authentic." He quoted the text as saying:

"A great punishment will fall on mankind . . . in the second half of the 20th century . . . Satan . . . will succeed in seducing the spirits of the great scientists who invent the arms with which it will be possible to destroy a large part of mankind in a few minutes . . . . A great war will be unleashed in the second half of the 20th century . . . millions and millions of men will envy the dead."

PM BARELY ELECTED

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Parliament accepted Liberal party leader Ola Ullsten as Sweden's new prime minister today but approval was so thin he will head one of the weakest minority governments in Europe.

Ullsten was cleared with only 39 votes of approval, all from his own party. Sixty-six conservatives and Communists voted against him and 215 lawmakers abstained.

Under Sweden's constitution a new prime minister is elected if he does not receive more than one-half the parliament members against him in the vote.

The election ended a week-long government crisis following Centre party leader Thorbjorn Falldin's resignation over Sweden's use of nuclear power.

Stalemate For Sealers

KIRKWALL, Scotland (UPI) — The ship of protesters delaying the Orkney Islands slaughter of 5,000 seals and a boatload of riflemen hired to shoot the furry creatures both rode at anchor in the foggy North Eea today while the government decides its next step.

"Each day delayed is a victory for us," said Pete Wilkinson, a spokesman for the California-based Greenpeace Foundation. "We're hoping to delay the slaughter another day."

Norwegian sharpshooters have been hired by the government to kill 1,000 cows and 4,000 pups in a culling measure to reduce the herd of 60,000 gray seals because their appetite for fish is too costly for Scotland's fishing industry.

Special regulations mean the hunters have only three weeks to carry out the slaughter. Four days already have passed without any seals killed as both hunters and protesters circle the bleak rocky islets off northern Scotland waiting for the next move.

Early today the red-painted [illegible] Kvitungen, and the green Rainbow Warrior manned by the protesters were anchored two miles off Askerry, a barren and undistinguished clump of rock uninhabited by either seals or people.

The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries, which granted the hunting license said it cannot be extended beyond three weeks, Wilkinson said. This is probably because after three weeks, baby seals are old enough to take to the water and the Seal Protection Act forbids shootng seals in the sea.

The hunters also have orders not to shoot if there is any danger to human life.

Small groups of protesters are camped on four of the larger islands in an attempt to get between the hunters' guns and the seals or, as a last resort, to shoo the creatures into the sea.

Animal welfare officials have asked for another meeting with Scottish Secretary Bruce Millan, one of the ministers involved in the decision to shoot the seals.

The government says the seal colonies have doubled in recent years and now eat an estimated 65,000 tons of fish a year, mainly cod, at a cost to the fishing industry of around $40 million.

The protesters say there is insufficient [illegible] evidence about how many seals there are and what they eat to justify wholesale killings.

The Orkney Islands, where the drama is being played out, lie off the northern tip of Scotland.

Shevchenko Ducks Queries

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Soviet defector Arkady Shevchenko went into hiding Thursday after accusing Soviet agents and the U.S. news media of exploiting his personal relationship with a female professional escort.

In a statement released through a Washington law firm, Shevchenko said he had at one time had a close personal relationship with Judy Chavez, 22, and had supported her "generously."

Shevchenko was the top Soviet official at the United Nations Secretariat until he went into hiding six months ago after being granted political asylum in the United States.

On Thursday he denied Miss Chavez's allegation that the money came from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA.)

Miss Chavez, in a television interview Monday, alleged that Shevchenko had paid her between $35,000 and $40,000 since he defected in April.

The CIA denied that the funds paid to Miss Chavez came from the agency, and said Shevchenko had received a substantial sum of money for his service with the UN.

Shevchenko, 47, the highest ranking Soviet citizen ever to seek political asylum in the United States, is now a consultant with the CIA.

But Miss Chavez's allegations have forced the agency to provide the defector with a new identity and location.

In his statement, Shevchenko said: "When it became known that I had decided to live in the United States, agents and supporters of the Soviet Union spread lies about my personal stability.

"It is true that I know Miss Chavez and at one time had a close personal relationship with her. It is also true that during this period I supported her generously."

He added: "I am deeply saddened by Miss Chavez's recent behaviour, but at least I can guess at her motivation. I am left to wonder at the motives of the televison network which exploited her and damaged me," the statement said.

Miss Chavez said she is writing a book about her relationship with Mr Shevchenko.
